There's no best vulnerability scanning tool. It all depends on its use cases such as web app testing, networks, clouds, or containers. Additionally some manual testing is required in the event automated tools may have missed certain vulnerabilities.

So can you tell me which tool is trusted by many people?

Don't rely on one tool. Use various web scanners to gather as much info as you can.

Paid - Trusted is Nessus.

Free - OpenVAS.

You get what you pay for though.... As others have said, don't rely on just one item, don't overlap items though.
