We have a long two months ahead of us it seems.

this need for control over situation in usa is bad. i blame social media for these thing it give people false perception of total control, "centre of the universe" syndrome. So when things like this do not go as desired, they believe fraud or things are not right. they live in country that voted 5:5 majority. this is their choice to live and principles their country was built upon.

is sad to see. other world superpowers are watching in confusion.

Students at Michigan State University are staging a walkout during classes to protest Trump's win. They claim Trump is a "serious threat" to their safety and futures and he risks the health of our planet.

Fat liberal women are protesting the Trump victory by not having sex for 4 years.

I'm all for peaceful protests and for standing up for what you believe in — even if I don't personally necessarily agree with it.

That being said, I'm not sure what some of these things are supposed to accomplish? Is a class walkout going to change literally anything? You can't even really argue it raises awareness as the election is probably one of the most public and well-known events in the entire world right now.

I'm just not sure what the end goal is, I suppose.

F4tDoinkz - November 7, 2024, 4:35 pm

Don't shy away from what the right did here. I am not condoning it and honestly I completely condemn it. Even a form of peaceful protest is unpatriotic. You accept who won. You move on and try again in 4 years. That is what is American. This, George Floyd, nor the Jan 6th incident were in any way American.

Trump won, oh fucking well. Democrats are sick of failed policy. Failing the working class who you honored to stand for. Maybe a change was needed.

Yeah idk either. I guess it's just virtue signaling for street cred or something.

I feel bad for these people tbh, they were used and manipulated and then left out to dry. I hope with time they will deprogram and better themselves.

At this point from what I am seeing on social media with calls for violence, threats, etc I am not so sure on how safe the months ahead will be for Trump supporters or white males in general.

That is shit I do not support and do not stand for, political violence and violence in general is unacceptable.

Have plans in place to keep you are your families safe especially if you live in major cities.
