Thread: I created a full service agency on Discord

Mxstermind - November 22, 2024, 4:29 am

So i created an agency a month ago with 2 friends.

System was to build a community and operate in discord.

I hired around 15 digital services providers, designers, developers and video editors to end up with only 2 of them actually delivering HQ work and active.

We create threads in forums advertising the Service providers and we end up having closing up to 27k$ deals.

Until last week we trusted someone and he ended up deleting whole channels & tickets.

We got back tho, new tickets coming in, new projects signed.

But I have that vision where I can take this simple discord server into a 1M$ Idea.

I'm confident that's everything is doable. However the tasks that I have to do are close to unlimited and I can't get a lot done in a short amount of time that's why I have to surround myself with skilled individuals who see potential and some things and doesn't leave opportunities on the table.

Was fun sharing this experience I might keep it up

Note: most if my agency sales thread are made by chatgpt and when I write things on my own, feel like it's gonna have more impact.

The thing is with Brandforge is, I'm most important thing is the service providers.

If i manage to get only 1 HQ UI/UX designer and 1 HQ Video Editor, then I hit the jackpot.

By HQ, I mean someone who can do a really great work in short amount of time and know how to talk to customers.

Everythings gonna be alright

You really sold for 27.000$ on your first month? Sorry if im skeptical but can you show proof of payments as in wallet or transactions. It just sounds like a silly amount on your first month to make logos and rebranding but im ight be wrong.

I was close to signing $15k, but my lack of closing skills made me lost the client so we it was just a potential good deal.

However, after that failure, I focused and we grew like crazy. And managed to sign $9k usd solana project.

It was easy thing to do. I created a place for both freelancers and businesses to get stuff done. Nowadays, Telegram and Discord has huge potentials and since I am familiar with running communities there, why not running something useful for everyone?
