Thread: Upgraded new gaming monitor

Yin Yang - November 22, 2024, 5:25 pm

I've had my Acer XF270H B monitor for close to a decade and it has served me well. It's not a huge one by any means, only 27" w/ 144Hz and 1ms response.

For work, I use a Samsung curved monitor, that's a 34 or 36", but I prefer a smaller, flat-screen for gaming, as it feels more comfortable for my setup.

After some research, I decided to stick with Acer and go for the Acer Nitro XV272U W2bmiiprx. This monitor caught my attention with its modern design, WQHD resolution, 240Hz refresh rate, 0.5ms response time, and HDR 400 support. It also has an IPS panel for better color accuracy and wider viewing angles.

The best part? It's currently on sale for Black Friday, 50% off for just $200 on Amazon! Here's the link if anyone's interested: <https://a.co/d/g2GrTlj>

I'm really looking forward to the upgrade, especially for smoother gameplay and sharper visuals. Anyone else upgrading their monitor this Black Friday?

Nice man!

I was thinking about getting a third. Then realized, do I need another one? Still debating lol.

I have two in my office at work, but at home I have two.

Gotta have one for music selection / Discord.

I mean for the price you paid I would say you definitely got a good deal. However I would always prefer a G-Sync monitor over FreeSync , purely because G-Sync is considered significantly better. In practice, both aim for smoother visuals, but your choice depends on your GPU and budget. FreeSync monitors tend to be on the cheaper side compared to G-Sync which isn't necessarily a bad thing.

G-Sync prevents screen tearing and stuttering, while FreeSync only reduces it. I'm a little degenerate when it comes to this stuff especially for gaming, I want the most stable and efficient setup visually to have the best gaming experience possible.

If you don't mind me asking what is your PC specs?

Hey OP, what's the word now that you've had for a few months? You got such a good deal on it, hopefully it's still a good deal
