Thread: Prepaid cards filled with crypto, no KYC?

Palac10 - November 24, 2024, 12:06 pm

Can you recommend any non-KYC service for prepaid virtual VISA/Mastercard that are reloadable or just purchased using crypto, particularly BTC? I know there used to be a list of such services/products in Zelos' telegram group, but the "exited" and deleted the group...

nelz - November 25, 2024, 12:00 am

Not reloadable but thebitcoinco, cake wallet and <https://trocador.app/en/> have prepaid cards that can be brought with crypto.

Yeah go have a look at Bitrefuel or similar services, many of them offer pre-loaded cards.

I am skeptical because of this

<https://help.bitrefill.com/hc/en-us/articles/12574694907538-How-do-I-become-a-verified-user>.

You can verify your account to enjoy higher purchase limits once the basic account limits are reached. You can easily verify your identity through a process called Know Your Customer (KYC). Note that in certain cases, we reserve the right to request you to verify your account.

I haven't verified yet, I'm still "basic" which seems to have plenty of room for usage ($10k monthly) before you get KYC. If you're looking to move $100k+ annually then almost everything you'll want that's legit will want KYC. My guess is even if you do $60k ($5k a month) you'll get flagged and KYC'd. But since there was no KYC, you just open another account under a new email and IP.

Yeah those guys. I've used them a handful of times ages ago for prepaid cards and they worked fine. The only caveat is that some countries (the UK for example) will require you to KYC the card itself, so you'll need access to a mobile number that can receive an SMS.

Same rules as centralised exchanges if you have to use them - don't keep funds there, move them out ASAP, avoid reusing accounts if you can, don't have different IPs in the same session etc etc.

Sounds paranoid, but MEXC (for example) says they have a basic account that's not KYC with a decent daily limit, however if your IP changes during the session it'll be autoflagged and you'll be forced to go through KYC.

Yeah basically this.

Never heard of it. Be really careful about connecting your wallet to something like this. Possible scam. It tries to connect to your Coinbase wallet. Fuck that.

Prettykitty - November 26, 2024, 7:08 pm

There's a big list on another forum.. Not sure if I'm allowed to share.

All people that have tried it, never talked about it was scam, at least in europe

Mewtwo - November 27, 2024, 4:01 am

I've used this website before: <https://pst.net>

(Only good for the sites that don't accept prepaid cards. This site would come in handy, especially for advertising on social media)

If you're on US IP, just use a VPN and choose a country that isn't US based Issued from Singapore, may not work at all merchants. There Fee section doesn't actually state the fee, just that there is one. So likely high fee and low limits.

Domain about a year old, appears legit but shaky imho. Anyone trying it should do low amounts and lots of testing first.

I have used sol card for quite a while now its really good, u can add it to apple pay/google pay and tap whatever u want and it always works for me, but would recommend to only load ur card when ur going to spend it the exact same day or whatever (just incase) i can even use the card on amazon etc and other online merchants i just bought the visa one as it works good for me but some stuff isn't aloud to be purchased you need to visit the FAQ to see what you can and can not purchase.

Still recommend this. I have used this 4/5 times in past couple of months. Works well, no kyc.

There is 1$ fee for each txn though. I don't really mind that for the peace of mind.

Same here bro. Fees aren't the greatest but beggars can't be choosers I guess.

Their MasterCards are still non-KYC, I believe the Visa is KYC now. Used a new MC from them today with no problem.
