Thread: Additional Ways to Gamble Your Bytes

I know, I know, Hackforums isn't a gambling site, but it would be great to see additional ways to gamble your bytes. Adding games like Plinko or Mines to the games tab would be a nice touch. While it's not a critical addition, it would certainly be fun :D

I couldn't find if this has already been suggested, but if someone has and more importantly if the suggestion has been denied, please reply to this thread and I'll close it.

I will work on some new game options soon enough. We lost HUM and DNP recently. I want to replace them with better gamification options.

The Queen of Hearts is a game where players purchase tickets for a chance to win a jackpot by matching a drawn card to the Queen of Hearts:

How it's played

A 52-card deck with two jokers is used, and each card is placed in a sealed envelope with a random number. Tickets are sold, and a ticket is drawn randomly each week. If the card drawn matches the Queen of Hearts, the ticket holder wins the jackpot.

Other cards

If a Joker is drawn, the winner receives $50. If an ace or face card is drawn, the winner receives $20. For all other cards, the winner receives free tickets for the next week's drawing.

Pot growth

The pot increases each week until the Queen of Hearts is drawn.

Rules

Rules can vary by location, but some common rules include:

Players must be present to win.

Tickets must be sold with the player's legal name, phone number, and card number on the back.

Tickets are disqualified if they are tampered with.

Benefits for venues

The Queen of Hearts game can be a fun experience for patrons and a profitable way for bars and clubs to increase revenue. However, venues must comply with local and state regulations.

I'd love to see HF poker get developed first but it's a good idea!
