Thread: Side Income With Instagram Subscriptions

Mooooookie - December 12, 2024, 1:35 am

Some of my deposits from Instagram Subscriptions. This is one of my side hustles that I use to earn extra income when I'm not doing work for my regular business. Started about 18 months ago, took me a while to perfect my strategy due to Instagram being extremely strict on anything uploaded that gets monetized.. but once I overcame that obstacle, the earnings have been pretty consistent.

Bastille - December 12, 2024, 1:50 am

Really nice, does it take a you a lot of time every day ? Do you post every day ? Do you use AI generated content ? Can I ask you what the Instagram profile is about ? And how many followers you have ? Do you pay taxes on this ? Do you have to use your real identity to withdraw the money ?

I'm thinking about side hustles, thought about making an Instagram account about hacking but I was worried that it could be the same as YouTube which they don't appreciate hacking content and it's often demonetized.

If some posts are demonetized, can you still earn with other posts, or you loose your "creator" position ?

I'm a complete noob regarding that, maybe I'm not using the right terms tho

Great questions, I'll be happy to answer them to the best of my ability.

Do you post everyday?

I'm doing this on multiple accounts, some of them I post daily, others I post around every 3 days or so.

Do you use AI generated content?

No, I don't use any AI generated content. But I will say that original content is important. Instagram can easily detect duplicate content.. even when filters and basic editing has been applied. Always use original content that hasn't been posted on the platform, for best chance of reach.

Can I ask you what the Instagram profile is about?

I'm unfortunately unable to divulge this information.

And how many followers you have?

All the profiles vary in size from 50k - 160k

Do you pay taxes on this?

Yes.

Do you have to use your real identity to withdraw the money?

The accounts are in my registered businesses name. I withdraw the funds to my business checking account.

If some posts are demonetized, can you still earn with other posts, or you loose your "creator" position?

Instagram is overly strict when it comes to Monetization. If you have a post removed from your regular Instagram posts, your monetization will be disabled for 90 days. If one of your regular accounts posts gets demonetized, you will still be able to have monetization on the account, that particular post won't be eligible to earn any money. Your best bet if you're going to monetize on Instagram, is to try and stay compliant. Try not to allow user feedback to talk you into posting anything that might get removed. When I first started, I would feed into what some users were saying.. and would push the envelope, and got demonetized. I've since learned from then, to just post what I want to post.. not what they want me to post. If they don't like it, they can follow a different account. The goal is to keep your account monetized by any means.

Pretty impressive, always wondered how much people were making when I come across pages that use this business model.

Thank you so much for your time and all of these useful information ! I'll take a look at the Instagram and Tiktok rules so I'll not get worried about being banned and so on.

It would be nice if I can earn few hundreds per month, let's see how it goes !

JNath - December 12, 2024, 6:54 am

How much time can it take for someone to start making like a grand per month from this bro?

VI8IV - December 12, 2024, 9:01 am

As you said you post what you want to post, thats means you're not posting based on specific niche?

You're welcome, and good luck! To be honest, most of the popular social platforms have monetization programs.. and they all can be really profitable, if you find the right niche and right program to go with that niche. I found IG Subscriptions to be most profitable for what I'm doing, but I've also seen people make more then me using other monetization programs.

Pick your platform. Choose your niche. Grow your account. Pick the best monetization program for your niche. Typically goes in that order.

(Dec 12, 2024 07:54 AM)Cypress.io Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How much time can it take for someone to start making like a grand per month from this bro?

It really depends on your ability to grow accounts on the platform, and how persuasive you are with your promotion. Instagram offers some tools such as Free Trials, Next 5 Promo, and Cancellation Promo .. some people utilize these, to help improve their subscription rates.

(Dec 12, 2024 10:01 AM)VI8IV Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) As you said you post what you want to post, thats means you're not posting based on specific niche?

I mean that in the sense of, I don't allow them to persuade me into posting anything I don't want to post. I still post specific to the niche that the account is. High quality content, and consistency is key.

(Dec 12, 2024 10:40 AM)Lowkey Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have a pretty large platform and could utilize subscriptions but I don't really understand how you get paid from them. People pay $2 a month to see content posted behind paywall or is there more to it>

Subscription rates are different for every country. First world countries have the highest rates, and so on. Here in the US, prices range from $0.49 to $19.99 a month.

Roytoy - December 13, 2024, 12:16 am

Nice stuff buddy! So you basically make money off of posts that only your subscribers see?

Mooooookie - December 13, 2024, 3:10 am

(Dec 13, 2024 12:36 AM)Lowkey Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Would be cool to hear your thoughts on monetizing a large artist platform and things that people might pay a fee for to see from a music / art perspective.

My first thought reading the thread is self-made gimmicky videos for the click-bait ish aspect feeding on people's curiosity but I don't know. I've talked to chat gpt and seen at least 9-10 pages of youtube ideas but a lot of these things are very niche or don't seem like they would work.

What type of artists are you referring to? Music? Local music? Something like that? That could work, as long as the artists fans are open to supporting them as a creator.. then it should gain some subscriptions.

In regards to self-made gimmicky videos, I'm sure there are people out there that are pushing that type of content, in hopes of tricking people into subscribing.. but that's not going to have any longevity, and no one will stay subscribed. I have a high recurring subscription rate, meaning when they subscribe they typically stay for multiple months before cancelling their subscription. I have some subscribers that haven't cancelled since they've first joined.

You don't want to create a subscription based off of crap, as no one will stay subscribed, and users will complain in the comments. And you don't want to turn your comments off, as that will reduce the amount of engagement on the account, which in turn will reduce the accounts reach.

(Dec 13, 2024 01:16 AM)Roytoy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Nice stuff buddy! So you basically make money off of posts that only your subscribers see?

Correct. They pay a monthly fee, and get access to subscriber only posts directly on the Instagram platform.

Isn't that hard to keep consistency? I wanted to do something but don't want to show my face. Is vendor status on HF worth it?

I can code stuff and was thinking to sell software. Is there any good website where I can sell software?

Not at all, as your followers/subscribers are there for a specific reason.. they want to see specific content, you as the account owner know what content they want to see, as they've already shown interest by paying for the subscription. So whatever you were posting to get them to subscribe, you should be posting a higher quality version of that for your paid subscribers. My face isn't shown in any of my videos, I'm actually not featured in any of them.

Is Vendor status worth it on HF? The answer to that question really depends on the type of person you are. If you're a hustler, and are good at selling services.. then yeah, Vendor status can be a great way to make some side income. When I joined this website, I didn't have any intentions of ever selling anything on here. As time went by, I noticed there were some services that were not being sold, as well as some being sold and I could sell them at a cheaper rate and/or offer a better deal.. so I upgraded to Vendor. I started off selling Aged Instagram Accounts, which is something I've been doing for years before I ever joined HF. Then later down the line, I started selling other services.

If you have that hustler mentality in you, and have a product or service to sell.. then yes, by all means you should consider upgrading to Vendor. While there isn't hundreds of people spending money on here daily, there are still people that come on to purchase services everyday. Not a day goes by where I don't get an inquiry in regards to something I sell on here. I would encourage you to go for it, if you have something to bring to the table.

I swear to god its so sad that this even has to be said, it applies to literally everything as well, not just Instagram Subs, When I first got into ecommerce people were doing these spam random listings on ebay/shopify to dropship, that shit has absolutely no sustainability and no path forward.

You don't get to see the quality of the products, the reviews were awful so it hurt any future sales, the recurring customer % was essentially 0, delivery times were bad, all you accomplish in the end is you've essentially scammed someone for a few $, was it worth it? Even the point about original content in your previous posts, Original Content used to be the standard now its the minority so it stands out so much more. I make the bulk of my income from Ebay sales and it didn't take me very long to come in and absolutely destroy the Niche's I picked because every single seller has horrible SEO'd listings, blurry product images and everything is just so old and dated.

In a world where everything is so automated and lazy if you even put in the BARE AMOUNT OF EFFORT you are already ahead of 95% of people. Take your own product images, make your own marketing material, code your own automation tools, theres so much that can be done to put yourself above the average.

Well when I have bought from dropshippers they were honest, but I would just get a refund every time because they never had my item. Or one of them sent the item but I didn't get the items until January when they were meant to be Christmas presents for my son. Then another time they didn't have the book so I accepted a different book, but it really wasn't what I wanted and I never read it and I'm disappointed it's just not the book I wanted.

So, now I really try to avoid dropshippers.

Also my dad's wife thinks that her books were stolen by this big company because I can't get her to understand that the big company is letting dropshippers list items on there and they just list every book title they can find no one has actually bought her books she put out with an old fashioned vanity publisher.

You're absolutely right, and it's a damn shame that this stuff is being able to be peddled to the people, and that these platforms don't put more effort into ensuring that users aren't getting ripped off. All the content on my Instagram accounts, as well as the subscriptions are original content, which plays a big part into why it performs so well. Nowadays, there are too many people that are around just to make a quick buck, and don't care about the longevity of whatever it is they're promoting.

Don't get me wrong, I was a spammer for a large part of my teen and adult life. I promoted CPA for many years, and anyone who knows about adult CPA, knows that stuff is crap.. they're fake dating sites, that are filled with fake users that will chat with the person and make them feel wanted. I honestly wasn't sure what the material was until I one day decided to sign up for one of the sites, and confirmed for myself that it was BS. That's when I transitioned from promoting adult content, to managing real influencers and content creators, as well as building my own pages with original content.

You think similar to myself, as a majority of the stuff I'm involved with, I come with on my own. I don't code my own scripts and software, but I have personal developer that I've worked with for the past 7+ years that has coded 98% of the scripts that I use. I like to be in control of everything I'm doing, and I like what I'm doing to be unique from what others are doing, as in my experience it nets the best results. When it comes to making money methods, I've been developing my own methods for the past 5 or so years. Prior to that, I too used to read the different free ebooks online, and attempt to purchase methods in the past, and I found from experience that majority of that stuff is low quality, and merely designed to make the seller of the course/ebook money. Developing your own method takes a lot of time, testing, patience, as well as money.. but the outcome when you've successfully come up with something unique, that you know no one else is doing, is extremely favorable.. as you don't have to worry about it ever being saturated.

With AI being prevalent nowadays, and being used to produce and reproduce content in bulk, there is going to be a lot of low quality stuff being peddled, as there will always be people that will take advantage of this stuff and find ways to profit from it. I've never sold anything on eBay, but I have friends that have been pretty successful in that field. I have one friend that has been doing eBay + YouTube for quite sometime, I would say at least 4 years, and the numbers he takes in is pretty impressive. I remember looking into dropshipping some years ago when it got really popular, but never ended up following thru with it.

Thanks bro, appreciate the encouraging words. I'm hoping to expand things this year. Last year was more for stabilizing the method, and learning the best ways to avoid losing the monetization on the account. Now that I have figured out that part, time to scale up.
