Foxy Proxies Ltd - December 18, 2024, 12:23 pm

What grand meal does you and your family plan on for Christmas Day?

Deany - December 18, 2024, 12:23 pm

Stuff similar to Thanksgiving... Ham etc...

Probably just doing a ham, taters, green bean casserole, pies, banana pudding, dinner rolls, stuffing and cranberry sauce this year. No need to go all out.

We usually do turkey and ham, yams, squash among other things, totally going light this year.

Charlie Sheen - December 18, 2024, 4:26 pm

Most likely ham, mashed potatoes and gravy, some sort of bread. Not going too overboard.

Weird, think here "UK" is Turkey/Chicken whatever is preferred by people, Yorkshire puddings, sprouts, gravy, peas and stuffing.

Then the dessert is trifle with heavy cream over the top.

Tbh, I know how you feel because I still remember being a kid and it was always my grandpa that made Xmas dinner, Soup for starter, then main course what I said previous and then the pudding, but it was like for 9 - 12 people but now, can't do that as fucks are so picky with eating stuff lol.

Yeah. Out of everything I would be lucky if my daughter ate the mashed potatoes or stuffing. Not sure what my son would eat. So picky.

Congratulations, I have a 5 and 7 year old and my wife is 7 weeks pregnant right now. We thought she was further along but she went to the doctor this week and they determined she was like 6 weeks 4 days as of the other day.

So we are a week ahead. I think ours is projected for July. My wife had a C section last time so unless the doctor says otherwise she may have to have a c section again.

Well apparently our due date is August.

sharn - December 19, 2024, 5:58 am

For Christmas, we are having turkey paired with chestnut stuffing.

Sounds delicious. What wine selection are we having with dinner?

BlackRock - December 19, 2024, 10:10 am

Duck :D taste is amazing.

On Christmas Eve, it's tradition for us to eat fish. On the 25th, there's no specific tradition.

What do you normally eat on the 25th then? A different variety each year, or something different?

Unfortunately, I've been a victim of karma, so I believe in it more than ever now.

Pimping - December 30, 2024, 1:16 pm

We had some turkey, stuffing, mashed potatoes, and small ham and an apple pie
