That's a crazy amount for a transaction fee, I'd be cheap over maybe $50, 800,000+? Unimaginable.

Failed Thorchain swap. The OP_Return data is consistent with Thorchain swaps.

Dude set up a swap with a standard sized fee, about 11.25 sats/vb. Then for whatever reason, instead of executing the swap as intended, 7 additional inputs were added, and each of these inputs paid a fat fee.

No idea why they did it. Best guess is a bug in a thorchain wallet or the dude tried to manually edit his transaction and failed catastrophically.

I would actually throwup if this happened. Idc if I was transferring 10m worth of BTC. I'd be physically ill.

Usually those types of fees, they're more likely mistakes and they ask the miners to return it. It happened before anyways with someone losing I believe a million dollars on btc fees
