

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: \$HAWK coin lawsuit

Charlie Sheen - December 19, 2024, 6:02 pm

'Hawk Tuah' girl Haliey Welch's development team behind the shady crypto token has been sued by investors. Personally I'm hoping they are held accountable as well as she herself. She isn't named in the lawsuit but I'm hoping this gets the attention of the right legal arm to handle this. After listening to the CoffeeZilla podcast where he spoke to her and her team about the coin, I believe 100% this was an orchestrated scam.

Source:

<https://nypost.com/2024/12/19/business/murky-group-behind-hawk-tuah-girl-haliey-welchs-failed-me-me-coin-sued-by-investors/>

jcole - December 19, 2024, 6:05 pm

This is good news for the investors, and hopefully a lot of the crypto community that pulls these low quality stunts.

Beherit - December 19, 2024, 6:07 pm

Almost 500 million to <100 million market cap, sheesh. Scary to think about with other altcoins. Radio silence - probably just advised by lawyers not to speak on it because she'll just hurt her case even more. Hope justice prevails here.

Flan. - December 19, 2024, 7:05 pm

Hawk tuah spit on that thang should not be taken as financial advice

Bashe - December 19, 2024, 9:49 pm

(Dec 19, 2024 08:05 PM)GoodDay2U Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hawk tuah spit on that thang should not be taken as financial advice

That's what fame does to you...

What's crazy is that when everyone was trying to find out who she was, she didn't want to do this kind of life. She said she was going to stay home with her grandma and take care of her. Look at where she is now. Scamming her "fans," but in actuality she's just milking them because she wasn't famous for anything actually special anyways.

Jamika - December 20, 2024, 4:20 am

Personally, I don't know her or her token, but the recent wave of ridiculous new cryptocurrencies strongly confirms that the only guaranteed investment is in Bitcoin.