Thread: Whats on your bucket list?

Bashe - December 20, 2024, 1:31 am

Like the title says, what are some things on your bucket list you need to do before you die?

sharn - December 20, 2024, 4:09 am

Skydiving is definitely on my bucket list.
I cannot wait to try it.

Have a foursome with Kendall Jenner, Natalie Portman and my wife. :D

Life goals.

Beherit - December 20, 2024, 4:38 am

Nothing crazy at the moment. Skiing, snowboarding, climb a mountain - maybe MT. EVEREST!?

Skydiving is on mine as well! Although it doesn't help that I recently saw a video of a girl who went skydiving and both her parachute broke, and her instructor was unconscious. She survived with heavy injuries, but hey, I guess it was good she survived.

Japan is amazing! I was stationed there not too long ago, hoping to go back.

Ah, mainland is where it's at.

I'd like to visit space. I used to dream of looking in the vast galaxy, but I eventually became afraid of it.

And you think that's achievable for you?

I don't feel like it is achievable yet. Maybe if it became part of tourism then everyone, not just me, can go to space easily.

I'll be keeping it in my bucket list as long as I am alive.

Fair enough, I hope you'll be able to achieve that some day.

Out of topic. Is the award automatically awarded or you have this button to press to get it after making it 100%?

Nope, the award is automatically awarded.

I can't recommend skydiving enough. My first skydive changed my life for the better and then I became obsessed with it.

You don't ever get scared something bad could happen?

Oh I definitely get scared every time. I've had a few "oh shit" moments but to me it's all worth it. I have a panic attack every time I'm at the door right before jumping but the second I'm out of the plane, that fear dissipates and I'm locked in and focused.

Couldn't be me. Seen a couple of videos where horrible shit happens despite every party involved being adequately trained.

It's definitely a high risk no doubt about it. To me it's worth it as it's elevated my life in so many ways but yeah, when shit goes wrong, it really goes wrong.

It's amazing there! Let me know if you want any spots to check out. Most of them are just filled with tourists nowadays, but there are definitely some lowkey spots that are great tp explore.

I did a huge list but most likely not gonna manage to go everywhere ? still, it'll be an unforgettable memory, you have been in Japan or you live there?

Google Fi, although they have a specific number of days, you can go outside of the U.S. and utilize it before they shut off your service. Otherwise, it's amazing.

I didn't have to deal with that since I was on orders.

Quite a few things. In fact I posted them here some time ago in a different thread.

It includes learning things like Piano, Public Speaking, Mathematics. Other things like visiting that place or watching a World Cup Final match. Material things like buying a big ass house and a giant ass telescope.

That's a fairly hefty list, all of them seem attainable to me.

Why the giant ass telescope? Sounds a bit random.

I like space and things around it. Having a big telescope would allow me to see and discover all the stars and space phenomena that I want.

As a kid I was always super interested in that kind of stuff, now, not so much.
