No but you can definitely make money online!

These ebooks are typically designed to generate income only for the seller. The true "money-making method" is selling the ebook itself, not the content within it.

They are promising unrealistic results, passive income with minimal effort, exploiting people's hopes or desperation for financial freedom. The content in these ebooks is often outdated, recycled and plagiarized from freely available resources online.

Real wealth-building strategies require effort, time and learning - not secret formulas sold on forums.

As is usually the case unfortunately. I often suspect many of these method sellers use paid vouches behind the scenes from elite members to give an illusion of being authentic. Wouldn't surprise me. Not sure about that though.

I'm actually in the process of self-authoring a method e-book and am hoping to wrap it up in about 2 weeks. I've got about 300hrs spent crafting it but not sure anyone will genuinely take it seriously once I roll it out because I'm a new member and plus will be asking a fairly steep price point.

Not sure what else I can do to leverage myself. The method has the capacity to produce sizeable earnings which also acts as a downside because it sounds too sensational to be true. Might be +300hrs down the trashcan if no bites.

RIP

Eh, it's a tossup. I say you get the knowledge under your belt academically then come back and reanalyze because then you know what is legit and isn't.

I know a few people who have made money with botnets and reseller hosting years ago but this a dying niche.

Ebooks are poor. Look around for proven methods like Ewhoring or do something like day trading if you can really read the market or get good signals. There are ways of making money but you have to work at it and find the right niche and method.

Your approach to making money on hackforums is wrong. Your objective should be to teach yourself and learn as much as you can. In time, you will work on projects that you will gain experience from. With the culmination of your experiences, a unique or niche strategy will come along that will be undiscovered because you took the time to develop both yourself and a strategy.

Buying a $20 clickbait-gorged ebook from a stranger on the internet who probably ripped that idea off from a different book is only going to perpetuate poor quality results again and again.

The amount of money to be made is endless, it is your mission to take your piece of the pie. No one else is gonna cut it for you
