Hello, I want to ask if any good hacker use gentoo hardened or arch with hardened kernal? I heard some where that l33t hackers use gentoo hardened as its secure.... Thank you in advance....

Most professionals use Kali in a VM. Some enthusiasts prefer to build their OS from the ground up, but most just want to get on with the job. There's no benefit to using gentoo or arch

Sorry for noob question but isn't kali suppose to be a pentesting distro and not intended for find vulnerabilities and stuff? Parrot is way better than kali and if you are a serious red hat, blackarch has to be the best...not because of its tool repo... But because it's based on arch, a very secure and hardened os... So when you say professionals do you mean pentesters?
