Thread: Hogwarts Legacy is a LEGENDARY game.

Hey guys, so I finished Hogwarts Legacy a few days ago. The ending is great, the story is wonderful, and the gameplay is great. Sooner or later, I'm going to 100% the game.

Anyone here played it? What did you think of it?

Literally a terrible game, would much rather enjoy fortnite unironically

You probably played it on shitty graphics, the game is a masterpiece. I cried lots when good goblin man turned out to be brother of evil goblin man and evil goblin man betrayed him

I think it was a pretty solid game, could have been better in a lot of places.

I think they're releasing the second one this year.

I had gotten it for the playstation and loved it for the few hours i played. But the kids dominate the tv and i never have time to fire up a console unless its handheld.

I then got it a few days ago on the switch, the deluxe edition was 80ish% off and i had $10 in points.

Even with the shittier graphics its a good game. I don't really care for the story and just skip it, but the gameplay itself is fun.

The game was certainly solid. I got it Pre release. I was pretty addicted to the game for a long while. I did every side mission along the way. Discovered all the the things to find. And pushed through the story. But eventually I just lost interest in it and never picked it back up to finish it. I am willing now since I am so close probably but I play on PC now and I had that game on Xbox so I would have to completely restart. Fuck that.

The thing that got me the most was the lack of a theft system. You could steal and steal in front of anyone and nothing happened. That was wild to me.
