Thread: Is my SOL \(or Exodus\) potentially being targeted?

Eran - January 5, 2025, 9:42 am

Just noticed these failed transactions when I started unstaking. Should I transfer my funds ASAP?

Or is this a common Exodus error and I'm just tripping?

Other than starting the unstake progress I did not make any transactions. Idk what these are. Never happened.

LeetSpeed - January 5, 2025, 9:48 am

That looks kind of suspect.

Novo - January 5, 2025, 9:52 am i think to not take a risk and just transfer funds.

Hero - January 5, 2025, 9:52 am

I staked my Cardano, but when i unstaked them, i did not have a failed transaction. Transfer your funds to a Wallet only on your phone and buy a trezor hardware wallet ASAP.

campusminger - January 5, 2025, 10:04 am did you check the transactions like why did it fail?

gas fee issue or multiple request or maybe this is sus, better move out the funds.

Well, in the failed transactions, the receiving address is my own? Like literally says 'Sent to' and it's my address.

I'm about to swap my SOL for SUI in a different wallet. Was planning to swap only half but I'll take this as a sign from the universe to move more funds to SUI.

Got a Trezor Safe 3 during blackfriday and it cost like 50 dollars. Definetly worth it and if you hold big amounts of crypto a must.

I don't think anyone who holds big amounts of crypto should wait for a $40 discount in order to buy a hardware wallet.

I was holding my crypto only on my phone before, so i didn't care about being reckless. But now i hold it on my hardware wallet and got the handwritten seed in a bank trezor.

Thank you. I definitely do not hold big amounts if you look at other people but considering someone in my old apartment building tried to airdrop steal something while I saw through it immediately perhaps I should.

I just want top of the line security for my coins. Obviously i could have a cold wallet but meh. It is proven to be secure tbh.

I feel you on that. I need to have a physical key (even if on notepad) and a biometric safe if I am holding what I would consider a lot because I am a weirdo who needs to write everything down - i actually do not even keep that on my person it's with a trusted individual

Can you link to the transactions on an explorer or share your wallet address?

Mewtwo - January 5, 2025, 10:45 am

Would highly advise using a flashbot, your wallet might be compromised.
