Thread: Kim Jong-un bans hotdogs for North Koreans, cooking them an act of treason

North Korean dictator Kim Jong-un is known for his intense crackdowns on its citizens in everyday life and now a popular food item has been banned.

According to reports, Kim has banned North Koreans from eating hotdogs as part of a crackdown on Western culture slowly oozing its way into the hermit nation.

The hotdog has grown in popularity in South Korea, and Kim has since declared that serving sausages is now an act of treason against North Korea.

It is claimed that people caught cooking or selling hotdogs could find themselves arrested and sentenced to hard labour in their infamous labour camps.

Kim has also forbidden the sale of budae-jjigae, a South Korean-American fusion dish made from an umami-rich broth, Korean hot pepper paste, flakes, kimchi, and American Spam, beans, and sausage.

The hotpot dish, which means "army base stew", contains hotdog meat or spam which has been banned in the North.

The fusion dish appears to have crossed the border into North Korea around 2017, more than 50 years after its creation in the South.

Budae-jjigae was created in the 1950s when US soldiers in the region discarded meat. South Koreans used the meat to create stews.

According to Radio Free Asia (RFA), North Korea has also banned steamed rice cakes tteokbokki which is a popular street food in South Korea.

Food isn't the only thing the hermit nation is cracking down on. Reports emerged in December that claim people who get divorced in North Korea are facing one to six months in labour camps for their "crimes".

Divorce is considered an anti-socialist act and anyone who wishes to divorce needs the Government to sign off on any requests.

According to RFA, a divorced woman claimed she served three months of labour and said that women receive harsher sentences than the men.

Ban one of the cheapest foods for an already starving population.

Hopefully one day the North Korean people stand up as well as their soldiers and become free from that barbaric regime.

At this rate, we'll be called 'brainwashed' for badmouthing North Korea soon enough. They'll start saying that's "fake news" and that North Korea is a lovely place to live, and always has been.

Ah, the times we live in.
