Thread: POV - Riding across Pokrvosk sector frontline

I think it's interesting to see the state of the frontline here, at least for this stretch of miles.

It's cool that we get access to clips like this. There are thousands online, and while this one is more SFW than others... you can even go see combat if you know where to look for the videos. Some are a bit more traumatizing than others.

The link works fine, but honestly, I don't see anything particularly remarkable in this video. With so many conflicts happening around the world today — fires, floods, and wars in the Middle East — this feels like an ordinary scene in someone's backyard. ?

Yeah I think the sheer size of the land changes things, or really extends convoys across miles of road

True true

Although I am glad to see some logistical problems here in this video. Soldiers walking, clearly injured - dead or dying laying on the side of the road. Countless vehicles broken down and blocking the road. If this is an example of what the rest of the frontline is like, then it's a pretty big sign that Russia has logistical and transportation issues.

All in all, it could be worse - if Russia had a modern military strategy, Ukraine might've been toppled over a year or two ago.

I just wish Russia would leave so the conflict could be over.

This link has the opposite POV, so you can see many of the targets actually get hit previously. They're calling this the "road to hell" or a "death road" - there are subtitles on this one with commentary.

Damn dude, whoever is filming that has some balls. Im not exactly sure how active that road is, but the fact that there is live fires means its not exactly safe lol.

Its sad though, the overcast weather really puts another feeling on this.

Yeah EU and Soviet land areas always turn into an abysmal grey & bland backdrop in war footage
