The lack of replies likely implies the fact that we are not your personal research team and these are things you have to find out on your own or through networking with other people and reading market briefings every day then making your own judgment call based on historical price indicators, political climate, and more.

It seems you are very new to cryptocurrency based on this thread so I really suggest you just do some basic research first before investing anything unless you are looking for us to drop a juicy gem on you that nobody knows about which by all means someone go ahead and let us know where it is.

Just think of it like this: what if you never heard of bitcoin before. But it still existed and was worth $1. How would you find out about this digital currency?
