Thread: What if I record myself, making hacking videos for HF ?

Bastille - January 26, 2025, 6:26 pm

I'm not talking about recording my screen and virtual machines with boring and notepad-based tutorials. I'm talking about hacking things in real life. I'm talking about things like getting a Flipper Zero, explaining it, and showing HF how it works on real-world stuff—like garage doors, my car. I could go outside with a cyberdeck backpack and hack whatever I could hack, maybe surfing on the edge sometimes ... I'm talking about capturing the true hacking vibes of the '80s-'00s that we all probably miss.

I have many ideas on my list; I'm just wondering if it's worth planing, recording, editing, and posting.

I'm also looking for feedback from social media experts on a few things, such as: Which platforms I should post on (I know YouTube sometimes bans hacking videos, so I'm wondering if private uploads would still get flagged).

How I could protect these videos from being exported or stolen and reposted on other platforms.

How this could help drive traffic to HF.

...and any other tips or relevant suggestions.

I'm also looking for ideas and challenges about what I could hack, as long as it doesn't go against HF's rules, of course. Z I can confidently say that Fallen has brilliant members when it comes to hacking. I'd be glad to hear some ideas.

This project has several goals, including: Creating original content for HF—content that might not be allowed on platforms like YouTube.

Adding some value to HF compared to other forums, dragging traffic to the forum (from other social medias such as Tiktok, Instagram, ..)

Strengthening the community by going beyond written posts or voice chats on Discord (I really liked few events made by members who shared videos of their life)

For OPSEC reasons, I'll probably wear something like a ski mask. I already have few custom ideas that could be something unique to HF. GFX designers, feel free to share ideas or recommendations.

I feel like hacker culture is dying, and I want to give it a fresh breath of life. Anyone interested in participating, feel free to reach out and tag people that could be interested participating.

Maybe some feedback from Omniscient would be relevant, too.

It's not a personal project but rather a community project, of which we could create a character and something unique for the forum, with a name as well ?

Maybe this project is nipped in the bud, but I guess its success will depend on how strong the community really is...

Thanks if you've read this post guys

I can get in on that help you out if you wanted, as a demo, I took my Flipper, pwnagotchi and my pi5 with kali to a few friends houses to show what I can do.

What I did, used pwnagotchi to grab wifi hash while I was outside their house, cracked the pw with pi5, their Garage doors are wifi controlled, used Flipper to open that, then easy stuff like logging into router and changing wifi ssid, set dns on the router to point to my squid proxy server to inspect traffic.

And showed them how can control their traffic. Bastille

For all these I had approval, so maybe ask some mates to use their environments and in the video do your thing, but at the end say something like you had approval. etc

On a side note-

Im doing something similar in the world getting people back to hacking - but going younger generation.

Im setting up a learning platform which I will host for free for kids 13 - 18.

Since im going through training myself, I will be sharing that knowledge with them.

Omniscient - January 26, 2025, 6:52 pm

please please do it

Zher0 - January 26, 2025, 7:16 pm

Would be hard to figure out a platform. I've heard of people getting banned pretty quickly on Tiktok and other platforms for ethical/infosec videos. You should definitely go the short-form content route though, if you can find away around the bans. Maybe test out all of them - Facebook/reels/Tiktok/Youtube shorts.

You could pair the videos/shorts with a tutorial on HF. Just say go to this thread to get the script, etc.

Omniscient - January 26, 2025, 7:31 pm

can maybe do rumble since you can embed here

Klonopin - January 26, 2025, 7:53 pm

I love this idea; I would love to see some hardware tinkering/hacking from you. I am also willing to help you with projects along the road.

I can help with coding, editing, and graphics when it comes to the projects.

Quote:Which platforms I should post on (I know YouTube sometimes bans hacking videos, so I'm wondering if private uploads would still get flagged).

YouTube is sometimes okay with it, as long as it is for educational purposes. However, there's also Rumble, on which you should be able to get away with most things. Or even X.com; I'm sure it would slide and would draw quite a bit of attention compared to Rumble, since the engagement there is good.

I truly believe this would help bring new faces to HackForums, a ton.

I truly hope that this will happen and I'm not much of a hacker myself, but if I can assist you in some way then please let me know!

Which platforms I should post on: YouTube is okay to post on, but you will have to make sure it's very clear that it's educational purposes only like Klonopin has said. Omni said you can embed with Rumble. Also, a great option.

How I could protect these videos from being exported or stolen and reposted on other platforms: This will be a much harder task than anything really. There's not really a way to prevent this unless you make it private but then that won't bring traffic to HF.

How this could help drive traffic to HF: Others will find your videos interesting; you can maybe add HF to your videos a little bit and they'll know where to go and where they could possibly learn it. Or they can find something they're interested in on HF and bam. New friends and family are welcome to HF!

Any other tips or relevant suggestions: I hate to say it, but TikTok traffic would be a great way to get exposure to your videos and/or HF itself.

I like this idea. This I what personally, I have been working towards.

I think this would drive traffic this way. Do it mate.

You can talk with me direct if you like about some of the things I have been working on also Fallen can come up with some real "HQ" ideas on what people are looking at learning. Which why within the group I have been pushing both black and white hat sections.

Its also the reason I wanted to start malware removal but thats on delay
You can draw alot of traffic on both the offence and defence.

100% Game

I was going to make the tutorials while using deep face live and switch my fce with the avatar which is some of the reason I have been upgrading hardware

Also looked into mass-producing youtube shorts related to hacking too.
Easy to create ad publish without much input to boost channel views and activity.

My plan was to do the tutorial on video but the text to be only available on HF thread.
So they can follow the video but if they want the direct instructions they need to sign up

That would be really cool and it's definitely the kind of content I was thinking about ! As I said this is not a "personal" project, like anyone could contribute, we just need to define the guidelines, the platforms, and so on. As the content could be striked on mainstream platforms, we could "tease" with short videos to drag people to other platforms such as Rumble and also Hackforums. If there are any troubles regarding sharing the URL of a hacking forum we could just encode it in the description, it could be like a challenge to find and join the forum.

Yeah I understand that keeping content without being stolen is complicated, we should at least think about some watermarks to keep the "legitimacy" of the videos. Even if they're shared by other people, watchers will still see hackforums.net or something like that.

+ for Tiktok, we have to if we want to target a larger audience

I think this is a great idea. There are plenty of real application hacking videos on youtube, they just don't do the illegal, which I suggest you do not do also. But just like using nmap, if you show real world application, you are hitting a grey area.

I have experience in creating/running a youtube channel. Only 800 subs, still active, but I understand the processes (I've dealt with privacy complaints against me), davninci resolve and plenty of other areas I can offer some help in if you need it.

I would not really suggest most platforms except Youtube. Rumble is mainly podcast and politics, kick is livestreaming and shock/react content.

I love the idea and think you should do it.

Security is a huge reason the hacking culture is less viral. It's not nearly as easy, and the barriers to entry can be expensive in time & cash.

I am a past YouTuber and can tell you 1,000,000% that tutorial/guide/walkthrough videos can be easy to gain traction with. I received millions of views on my videos. Some were montages, but many were guides or open-format videos of me showing a specific technology/game/etc.

For this reason I think you would be successful, even if you do it on a different video platform.

Thanks for the review, I'm mainly thinking about posting "teasers" on YouTube to encourage people joining HF to get full access of the videos (as they could be not allowed on YouTube because of policies), but I could also make some full video available that respect the policy and get some revenue with them, that would definitely help to buy some tools / devices to create more content ..

definitely recommend doing that!

You can make shorts which gain traction very easily, even for new channels. This should work out well and a lot of people use that format for linking off-YT to a site.

I think you can still do a fair amount on YT even if it's hacking related. Just depends on the exact format, how it's presented, etc.

May vary per video topic...

WHAT AN AMAZING IDEA! I thought about this to promote my service, but it's a lot of work. I thought about doing it in libraries or simulating it with a small GoPro. As for the videos, it would be cool to create a platform to store them. I believe it's the most efficient way to make the work available for everyone to see, even though it's a lot of work.

youtube shorts and tiktok will be your best bet try to be anonymoose or not but stay legal y'know?

Would be cool to get a visual - hands on - style video for certain things like walk throughs being talked out

I was talking about the 90-00s because of what hacking was back in the days, nowadays it's way different, it lost a lot of taste in my opinion. I want to bring back this "punk" vibe of people hacking not for money or things like that, but just for fun. Yeah I'll try to keep the video anonymous, there will be probably a lot of blurred content but I think I'll have to. As I'm into cybersecurity I don't want to fucked up my career doing illegals things, I'll sometimes surf on the edge but I'll not involve into cybercrimes.

I hope I could start in march/april !

I don't know much about all this, but I have heard of videos set to private getting a man perma banned from YouTube. He had had videos removed for a stupid ass reason and then he put one to private and boom he was perma banned.

The stupidass reason was so stupid, basically he made actually pretty comedic videos about the Isla Vista killings by Elliot Rodger and it was all fine he made fun of Elliot Rodger's whole manifesto and it was pretty hilarious. One of the videos was about "What an incel is."

Apparently, the FBI actually took his "What an incel is," video and were using it to train recruits on identifying incels. It is believed because of his YouTube decided that this YouTuber was an incel with murderous intent himself and banned all his Elliot Rodger videos and when he put on more up to private after all the rest were taken down they perma banned him and then when he tried to put more up on his girlfriend's channel they perma banned her as well. ?

Thanks for this info that's really valuable, I'll dig to get more info like these to see if it's risky even to store content that could be struck by YT as private. I'm also thinking about storing on more permissive / lenient platforms.

I will not dive into black hat activities as it's not allowed on the forum, but I know that some YTbers had videos struck while performing hacking on their own computers, because hacking is a touchy topic for YT.

Yeah I thought about watermarks, even if the videos are stolen HF will still be advertised (Jan 26, 2025 07:26 PM)Bastille Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm not talking about recording my screen and virtual machines with boring and notepad-based tutorials. I'm talking about hacking things in real life. I'm talking about things like getting a Flipper Zero, explaining it, and showing HF how it works on real-world stuff—like garage doors, my car. I could go outside with a cyberdeck backpack and hack whatever I could hack, maybe surfing on the edge sometimes ... I'm talking about capturing the true hacking vibes of the '80s-'00s that we all probably miss.

I have many ideas on my list; I'm just wondering if it's worth planing, recording, editing, and posting.

I'm also looking for feedback from social media experts on a few things, such as:Which platforms I should post on (I know YouTube sometimes bans hacking videos, so I'm wondering if private uploads would still get flagged).

How I could protect these videos from being exported or stolen and reposted on other platforms.

How this could help drive traffic to HF.

...and any other tips or relevant suggestions.

I'm also looking for ideas and challenges about what I could hack, as long as it doesn't go against HF's rules, of course. 7 I can confidently say that Fallen has brilliant members when it comes to hacking. I'd be glad to hear some ideas.

This project has several goals, including:Creating original content for HF—content that might not be allowed on platforms like YouTube.

Adding some value to HF compared to other forums, dragging traffic to the forum (from other social medias such as Tiktok, Instagram, ..)

Strengthening the community by going beyond written posts or voice chats on Discord (I really liked few events made by members who shared videos of their life)

For OPSEC reasons, I'll probably wear something like a ski mask. I already have few custom ideas that could be something unique to HF. GFX designers, feel free to share ideas or recommendations.

I feel like hacker culture is dying, and I want to give it a fresh breath of life. Anyone interested in participating, feel free to reach out and tag people that could be interested participating.

Maybe some feedback from Omniscient would be relevant, too.

It's not a personal project but rather a community project, of which we could create a character and something unique for the forum, with a name as well ?

Maybe this project is nipped in the bud, but I guess its success will depend on how strong the community really is...

Thanks if you've read this post guys

I really think it would be great, it would help me gain some experience and with these videos you can attract someone, Please do it

Here are some ideas (most of them used in yt videos)

- 1) Static Watermark on whole video
- 2) Dynamic Moving Watermark
- 3) Watermark which appears randomly (so if they steal it, they wont expect a random watermark in random timestamps like 2:13, 6:35 etc)
- 4) No watermark but during audio, the OP/talker talks about HF like to subscribe, url etc.
- 5) Sponsor/Affiliate/Advertisement Mini-Videos in random timestamps (either whole video is not shown until it finishes, or it shows as tiny banner completely randomly)

Omniscient - April 29, 2025, 8:56 am

Thanks for these ideas ! Definitely good, masking a static watermark can be easy but a moving one is more challenging, could help to deter people stealing the video, as it would also look worse with a moving mask for the watermark.

I genuinely believe these don't even need to be scripted. If you're going to be out in the wild, and masked up, use a clip on microphone. Definitely maybe keep talking points. Unless you can't just freestyle lol, which isn't a problem. Maybe I actually misunderstand the setting most of these videos will be in.

Hey, I was talking about the promotional video for the script, like introduction, things needed to be mentioned, the outro, and so on. Maybe I didn't use the right term in english

There will be different kind of videos, the first one will be promotional, the next ones will either be on hacking in real world, on tutorials, I'm also thinking about making videos on my HF tutorial threads (in case some people are struggling to read long threads and rather prefer to watch videos)

Anima - April 30, 2025, 8:54 am

You could possibly self-host something like Peertube to avoid any content takedowns? Granted this would limit your audience reach but if you were to put "safe" videos on youtube, and just advertise the site that you're hosting on? I don't believe peertube supports embedding on mybb natively but there could potentially be some workaround with a plugin?

If you're worried about your identity, you could always not show your face in the videos & have a generic "studio" so you don't get identified. From there, you can still talk as usual for the video but then use a tool to transcribe a script & then generate the audio in elevenlabs so that it uses a different voice without the headache of writing a script and timing the audio to the video

As for content being taken & reposted, i think it's sort of inevitable - Even if you watermark it it could be cropped out. Maybe audio & visual fingerprinting could work?

Audio:

Could have a beep pattern that is almost inaudible at different parts of the video

Cons:

If someone was to replace the audio on the video, then it wouldn't flag, Heavy EQ/remastering will reduce detectability and youtube will not likely automatically detect this

Visual:

At random points in the video, you could add a glitched/flipped frame so that so short that people won't notice but is there to prevent cropping, re-encoding, compression, and reposting

Cons:

If someone is savvy and knows to look, they can scrub frames manually
Some sites re-encode at 60fps or use motion smoothing which can smear the glitch or reduce it to a blur

They are by no means perfect solutions, and content will still get ripped and reposted (nature of the internet i suppose) but it could possibly help with detection on platforms like youtube (or not, who knows)

Hope this helps :)
