Thread: Covid Round 2? H5N9 bird flu is now officially in USA

Hackers - January 27, 2025, 7:07 am

Many scientists say it is not a matter of if, but a matter of when.

When will one of these bird flu strains mutate to be contagiously spreading through the air and infecting humans?

What will the fatality rates be like?

Many researchers state that this will happen, so we must hope for proper vaccines and other medicines to be invented ASAP. To do this, they can study the poultry farms that are affected by bird flu, look into how they spread, and identify ways to lower the chances of mutations. For example, killing all poultry at an affected farm is a top priority. But so is lowering the amount of contact between the birds and people. The less interactions, the less chance of mutation. More interactions? More mutations. This is the specific reason they say it's a matter of when, not if, for one of these bird flu strains going airborne and infecting the human race. The number of interactions people have with poultry on farms is excessive - way too high to avoid the risks of mutations.

Some of these have fatality rates of 50% in known human cases, and that's without any sort of major spread, and without overloading the facilities. If there was a major spreading of this, it could spiral quickly. It would definitely cause a lockdown much more strict than covid ever was if it became airborne.

Only time will tell. Fingers crossed it does not mutate. But the scientists do say it will inevitably. I know there are a few organizations (reputable, like the CDC) who are pushing for vaccines, testing kits, and more to be studied & created in advance. I think it's good that they are learning from the covid experience. Prepare sooner rather than later.

There are a few strains. The H5N1 is more common and the H5N9 had not yet been detected in USA - until now.

It has now officially broken through the borders and spread on a poultry farm. This is much more of a threat than anything or anyone else coming over our borders, that's for sure.

<https://www.reuters.com/business/healthcare-pharmaceuticals/us-reported-first-outbreak-h5n9-bird-flu-poultry-woah-says-2025-01-27/>

Quote:PARIS, Jan 27 (Reuters) - The United States has reported its first outbreak of H5N9 bird flu in poultry on a duck farm in California, the World Organisation for Animal Health (WOAH) said on Monday.

U.S. authorities also detected the more common H5N1 strain on the same farm in Merced County, California, they said in a report to Paris-based WOAH, adding that the almost 119,000 birds on the farm had been killed by Dec. 2.

Highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI), commonly called bird flu, has spread around the globe in recent years, leading to the culling of hundreds of millions of poultry. It also spread to dozens of mammal species, including dairy cows in the U.S. and killed a person in Louisiana.

The strain that has caused most damage in recent years has been H5N1. H5N9 is rarer.

"This is the first confirmed case of HPAI H5N9 in poultry in the United States," the U.S. Department of Agriculture said in the report to the WOAHA.

"The USDA Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), in conjunction with State Animal Health and Wildlife Officials, are conducting comprehensive epidemiological investigations and enhanced surveillance in response to the HPAI related events," it added.

I been warning of bird flu for a long time now.

If bird flu outbreaks in humans it will be an insanely worse situation compared to Covid. And it is not a question of if it is a question of when.

Unfortunately we have a bunch of dumbasses (mostly those on the far right) in this country who will claim it is fake, who will refuse any measures to help stop the spread and refuse any vaccine despite trials showing it is safe.

Well when Trump first took office the Obama administration actually left documents on measures to handle a pandemic and Trump actually ignored it.

Sources for what specifically?

If you are referring to it being insanely worse than Covid I base that on cfr. Covid at worst was 3% that obviously dropped.

H5N1 is between 50-60% depending on which source you look at but here is the good old AI which is the go to on HF these days.

AI Quote:

The case fatality rate (CFR) of bird flu (H5N1) in humans varies but is generally estimated to be around 50% in confirmed cases. This number can fluctuate based on the specific strain of the virus, the region, and healthcare conditions.

They were literally using tubes of the horse version of ivermectin despite studies showing ivermectin does not work, it did fuck people up though and hospitalize them.

It doesn't matter how much evidence, common sense and facts you put in front of these people they will keep sucking down that tube of the horse version of ivermectin.

The bird flu is just another scare tactic to make people reduce agriculture in the united states.

<https://www.vox.com/future-perfect/23963820/bird-flu-surge-us-ventilation-shutdown-veterinarians>

Believe it or not, it's more profitable for farmers to tell the government a bird has bird flu, then turn the heaters in the building all the way up until the chickens die from the heat. The government pays the bill for the heat, and also twice the market price of every single bird.

Yeah, exactly.

I see a very long post from one of these children below your post for example.

I'm sure he thinks he's 100% right and he's not brainwashed.

Jokes on him, the next pandemic won't be so forgiving to the retards who deny science this go around if it's anywhere close to 50%.

Lowkey, the thing with science is that we must base our decisions on what's available.

You quoting things years after a portion of our country ignored all available data is not as relevant as me sharing data before a potential pandemic.

If for example trillions of birds die and the first few people die at 50% rate, then we're right to discuss potential plans of it goes airborne. Nobody disagrees here, I hope.

Covid is a good example of all available data pointing to vaccines and masks being helpful to reduce the spread, and fatality rate.

You're free to deny that, but this thread is for Science. Please try to respect it a bit.

The site you linked says specifically, and I QUOTE:

" This nonprofit, made up of public health professionals, medical professionals, scientists, and journalists exists solely to obtain and disseminate the data relied upon by the FDA to license COVID-19 vaccines. The organization takes no position on the data other than that it should be made publicly available to allow independent experts to conduct their own review and analyses. Any data received will be made public on this website."

Read that 5x if you need to.

They're suing for data in general, not because they suggest there's a problem. They spell it out for you.

And I'll QUOTE again:

The organization takes no position on the data other than that it should be made publicly available to allow independent experts to conduct their own review and analyses

Now why do you think that is?

This is true but we also have to look at the numbers.

H5N1 had < 1,000 people for a testing rate to get the number of 50% ish.

H7N9 had <= 1,500 people for a testing rate to get the number of 40% ish.

Covid has a confirmed rate of 704,753,890 to get it's 3% ish from my quick google that I'm assuming is right.

That being said, I can tell you first hand when Covid first kicked off anyone that came into the ER / got admitted for any type of critical URI and died was just diagnosed as Covid related deaths because we were overrun so the number isn't 100% accurate.

I don't think Ivermectin is otc to inject yourself. The ones that received it were more than likely given it by doctors. I'm no pro man, but I am 99% sure Ivermectin was a human used drug way before covid was around and it only caught on fire because of CNN and the clowns on social media a part of the hive mind.

The vaccine was never proven. A lot of people got fucked up from it. I got the initial Pfizer and got hives and the sickest I've been in my life on both. I'm more worried now if it caused something with my heart now too since i've been in and out of cardiologists offices since i started getting tachycardia and small fits of heart heavy pain and pressure.

I regret getting the vaccines and wish i had the balls to reject the pressure around me to get it at the time. There were/is real doctors opposed to it too. The concept of rna vaccines is not new, but the use of it in humans is. We were test dummies. I'm not saying it was a ploy to controlling population or nano tech, not any weird shit. It is liability free, mass testing of new vaccine technology. Pretty shitty that it was almost enforced on the government level.

Idk what to say. I had the vaccine and boosters & so did my whole family and friends. The only people who got fucked up actually got genuine Covid. Others got it and were fine.

The % rate of vaccine problems versus Covid problems work in the favor of taking the vaccine. Was it deadly enough to shutdown entire country? At beginning with so much unknown, yes. But lockdown did need to end, and it could've ended sooner in places. At same time, it could've been extended in other spots. It is just another flu amongst many, with clear treatment plans, but even the normal flu kills millions.

I personally believe in vaccinations but I also know 100% that it depends on which company you took the medicine from.

There should be ongoing monitoring and studies on all Covid data, vaccine data, etc.

We don't yet know long term effects of either.

However, I do think that short term data leans towards the vaccines, masks, and lockdown being necessary and effective.
