Ayyy! Sounds good!

Man I wish Trump could see how beneficial it would be to have the perfect trade partner (Ukraine) next to our literal, historical enemy (Russia).
- maybe not for eggs, but in general

Times are weird. I hope we can return to a time of normalcy soon.

Long live Ukraine.

Ukraine doesn't even have a leg to stand on right now. They have the world's biggest beggar as president, a demoralized and defeated army, and are losing territory every single day of the week. What are you going to say when Kiev is encircled again? You gonna keep saying that Ukraine is winning?

If you say so mate.

They lost 1% of their land in 2024. That's not too worrisome, but is still a terrible thing for RU to do to their innocent neighbors.

You are the propaganda. That's not a big gain for RU at all, but they lost how many? How many casualties? Estimates have them at 400k+ casualties for a total of less than 1% gained in square kilometers... Lol. For 2024 alone. The 2023 data is even worse - almost seven times less land gained overall in 2023 than in 2024.

Tell me more about how successful RU is!

I have no doubt that Ukraine will prevail and that RU will regret this for decades to come. Ukraine is doing a fantastic job defending its nation and I hope the EU and US continue to support their cause. They truly deserve it.

Also for any Trumpers upset at grocery prices... Ukraine is a wonderful trading partner in the world of grain & other exports.

5 regions Ukraine has lost since 2022 and will never get back. Soon Ukraine will be force conscripting its teenagers into the army because they've got no one else left. Just wait for the puppet of the west (Zelensky) to make the announcement. You call this winning? Ukraine keeps hoping to negotiate for their 1991 borders but this will never happen either. Its a pipe dream. And Putin has no reason to negotiate with Ukraine at all because he's won this war already and even the west is slowly coming around to this reality. And the only thing Trump can try to do is negotiate a political solution to try and save face for the west. Ukraine has completely lost this war and no matter how much you deny reality, the rest of the world can see that Ukraine has lost this war.

There's some extreme irony in here.

RU just adjusted their conscription to extend the eligibility period. If you are found to be sick or unable to join the draft, you can now be re-enlisted up to a year later without needing to go through the review process again.

TLDR:

More 18 year old kids will be conscripted by RU to invade Ukraine, with this very recent change in the law.

No, Ukraine is not winning. There are no winners in war, especially not when a genocidal regime invades you and attempts to gaslight the world about it.

However, RU has much more to lose.

RU could win over time in a war of attrition - in a few years from now.

---> but this isn't worth it. RU is damaging their country more than what they are gaining from Ukraine.

That last part is important.

Even if Ukraine falls, RU has lost a lot.

I am not denying reality, I think you are.

You seriously think RU is winning hands down and isn't fucking up their entire economy? If you truly believe this, the propaganda is strong in you either intentionally, or unbeknownst to you. Either way, you are incorrect.

I also don't know what your attitude is all about. You seem to be almost proud of all this, as-if what you are suggesting is a good thing.

I see Putin and his cronies as no different than Nazis - killing innocent people for invalid reasons.

If Ukraine falls, then I would hope there would be years of attacks on RU from Ukrainian heroes that keep up the good fight.

RU deserves to collapse for this conquest - not walk out of here feeling good about life.

Russia is not force conscripting at all. That is Ukraine because they don't have any other soldiers left alive. Russia has on average something like 3,000 volunteers joining their armed forces every month. And Russians for the most part believe in their president and will not permit Washington to continue their illegal biolabs in Ukraine nor will Russia permit Ukraine to ever join NATO. And the west is already deflecting Ukraine from joining NATO for 20-30 years. But that isn't good enough for Russia because that only means in 20-30 years this war will reignite. So naturally Putin will not accept this, nor the freezing of the frontline right now as Trump is trying to do. Russia is not going to allow Ukrainian land to be used as NATO territory right on their borders and Russia has the right to say no to NATO trying to park missiles 400 km from Moscow. And remember, its Ukraine looting churches, outlawing languages, having so much graft going on by their politicians, military, and corrupt officials that anything not bolted down is being stolen as fast as possible. Even the military lost several territories because their military commanders are stealing the money needed to construct fortified defenses. Ukrainian soldiers are abandoning their posts and waving white flags and deserting in record numbers. Oh, but Ukraine is willing and they have noble causes right? Turning a blind eye to Ukrainian war crimes too eh?

yep, and as we deport workers, the cost of agriculture, construction, labor, and more goes up too. As we tariff Canada for example, some % of our annual lumber would cost higher at a premium. Many other imports from there would too. As would a lot from Mexico. Tariffs raise costs. Deporting underpaid labor raises costs. Removing income taxes would defund federal government and/or specific programs providing millions with healthcare or other programs. There are really so many downsides to the policies he is imposing, so I fully expect a lot of prices to raise. Unfortunately for us, what that means is our traditional trading partners will go to the EU, China, or Russia instead of trading with us, which devalues our USD and world power / domination. I hope Trump rethinks his plans so we can continue the good thing we have going here, and project even more power with crazy economic growth internally rather than gutting our current, successful hold on the global economy.

but the rise is lower in the long term. The whole point is to get people to produce in the U.S.A which will bring the price of products down over time.

the labor cost isn't true. Just because we deport workers those are illegal. There's always someone that needs a job. The companies don't want to pay them a lot of money. It cuts into their profits which will make them raise the price to make the same or more money. Right now the cost of labor is already expensive and people have been underplayed for many years. Paychecks are never adjusted to inflation.

The tariffs is a good idea and it's to put pressure on the companies to produce within the U.S.A. It's going to climate people from not paying their fair share. Income taxes are only paid by the middle class and the poor. Anyone making $400,000 that are employees are paying such taxes. While other's don't have to pay a time because either they use tax loopholes or they do tax evasion offshore because they can afford such services.

By making it tariff only over time it will get cheaper to run the government. It's because there's no tax loopholes. They just got to watch companies making sure they are paying their tariffs.

However, it won't happen. They won't let him get rid of the income tax because it's been tried many times before and it always gets shot down.

The reason for this is the elites don't like such a system because the current one allows them to pay zero or close to zero in taxes by doing crafty tax evasions. They been doing this since the day we started income taxes.

He wants to replace the income tax with a tariff tax. People will shoot it down. Back when we had a tariff tax system we never had a huge deficit in those times.

look at the graph: Graph

We currently don't have an economic growth. It's just a bunch of rich people getting richer by conning the public out of hard earn money.

We don't live in a free market anymore and it isn't capitalism .. it's corporatism that's when the big companies tell you what you will pay them and you better pay it. They create situations where you have to buy their crap.

Like a mobile phone. I never wanted it nor needed it. I hold out as long as I can. The government and the country aka the businesses put pressure on you to buy a mobile phone or else don't function within our society. The way things are right now and heading is moving towards a crypto type currency and a system where you will need a cellphone to just function in today's society.

I got it because a lot of restaurant and even government systems have been setup to use it. Right now it's optional but they're conditioning the majority to accept it. Once, majority of people are on board they will force everyone else to use it. This would require those that don't have one to instantly scramble for one.

We have a huge deficit and there's too many people running around with college degrees not able to get jobs.

The current system is cooked right now. There's no economical growth. Companies are doing layoffs right and left and drastically cutting labor costs.

In March where I live the McDonalds are taking the whole month of march to remodel. They are adding robots and conveyer belts to automate the process. Employees will only cook and clean. you have to use your phone or use their kiosk to order food but you need a credit card or debit card. They will no longer accept cash and also they won't allow refills on drinks. They will use a new soda dispenser that you have to scan your receipt qr code to use it.

I learned about this last week when I went to our local McDonalds to eat. They had a flyer notice. This means more and more people will not have a job and less and less jobs available. This is already in the works before trump took office.

The labor costs are already expected to go up and is why the minimum wage in a few states went up. It was why a lot of places decided to give a raise of $15 an hour for labor jobs and some got $20 an hour and it's because these people couldn't afford to live. They used to be government aid but that aid never went up so inflation caused this imbalance so the government shifted this cost to the companies.

The problem here is that no matter what if we keep the same system the cost of labor will go up. This been going on since we created the income tax.

the conclusion about labor costs is that it's complicated. There's multiple problems that is facing the rise in cost of labor.

We can say inflation is one factor but the population age is another and also people ages 18 to 40 there's a high number of people that are not working. These people don't have jobs and gave up but we have a record high in hb1 visas using talent outside the U.S.A to take these jobs at a lower pay. Which is what companies are doing to get by.

However, is what trump doing going to be the answer and I would say no. the economy is not doing good and it's because there's multiple issues at hand that no one wants to look at or care to think about. They think it's a simple problem with a simple solution. Just yell at people to get a job and do any job for minimum wage. Who cares if you have to eat or sleep or have clothes and a shelter.

This has been an ongoing issue for many years and we are at the point of the bubble bursting. I personally think it's too late to do anything.
I think the job market is cooked.

I myself am working a labor job. I got 2 college degrees but can't work in my profession because companies want 5 to 10 years of work experience and don't want to train people. They've been doing this for years. They still require a bachelor's degree but with experience.

I personally don't think what Trump wants to get passed will get through. I think most of it will get shut down completely or changed.

We have a big deficit and a lot of people cannot find work and these are college educated people. There are job postings and many jobs posted but they're not interested in hiring people. They just want to look at what kind of talent is out there.

Pigley - January 29, 2025, 12:01 am

I hope that people still will pay for the eggs despite price increase so those poor birds haven't laid the eggs for nothing. A terrible waste. I feel sorry for the birds. Ofc the ideal would be if large-scale bird farming was discontinued altogether. Chickens are among the friendliest animals on the planet in my opinion.

Yeah this is true. My future in laws looked into having a private farm and it would be quite a process to get up & running legally.

The community farms are more like acres of land and each house gets a small plot of land to work on.

It's pretty cool because you still get your private land - not forced to work together - but you have a designated spot with others. I feel like it encourages farming

As someone who has a small egg farm and is surrounded by other farmers for cattle, crops, eggs, poultry, bird flu is 100% real, it is not fake and it doesn't matter how clean or good of practices a egg/poultry farm has they still get hit badly by Bird flu.

No doubt big corporations are hiking prices at an unreasonable amount but when production slows and demand remains the same or increases prices rise with it but corporations are taking advantage of it.

But there is not some secret plan happening, bird flu is not intentional and farmers especially the small farmers are genuinely being hurt by it.

My suggestion go find a local small farm and see about buying directly from them or even better go do some research on what to do and buy some babies to raise up they are pretty cheap and you do not need very many at all to supply eggs for your family. Everyone who is able to should be doing this to begin with.

At a certain point, things will get so expensive, people will simply stop buying things. Restaurants will lose business, less money spent on entertainment, travel, the list goes on. I've already seen some restaurants in my area close because they simply priced people out of coming to eat there. The current trend doesn't seem sustainable to me.

Soon Ukraine will be force conscripting its teenagers into the army because they've got no one else left. Just wait for the puppet of the west (Zelensky) to make the announcement. You call this winning? Ukraine keeps hoping to negotiate for their 1991 borders but this will never happen either. Its a pipe dream. And Putin has no reason to negotiate with Ukraine at all because he's won this war already and even the west is slowly coming around to this reality. And the only thing Trump can try to do is negotiate a political solution to try and save face for the west. Ukraine has completely lost this war and no matter how much you deny reality, the rest of the world can see that Ukraine has lost this war.

Eat shit, katsap, you have no clue what you're talking about.

There are 837,610 dead orcs, nearly 2x as many as reported Ukrainian soldier deaths.

(Jan 28, 2025 10:36 AM)Foxy Proxies Ltd Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Russia is not force conscripting at all. That is Ukraine because they don't have any other soldiers left alive. Russia has on average something like 3,000 volunteers joining their armed forces every month. And Russians for the most part believe in their president and will not permit Washington to continue their illegal biolabs in Ukraine nor will Russia permit Ukraine to ever join NATO. And the west is already deflecting Ukraine from joining NATO for 20-30 years. But that isn't good enough for Russia because that only means in 20-30 years this war will reignite. So naturally Putin will not accept this, nor the freezing of the frontline right now as Trump is trying to do. Russia is not going to allow Ukrainian land to be used as NATO territory right on their borders and Russia has the right to say no to NATO trying to park missiles 400 km from Moscow. And remember, its Ukraine looting churches, outlawing languages, having so much graft going on by their politicians, military, and corrupt officials that anything not bolted down is being stolen as fast as possible. Even the military lost several territories because their military commanders are stealing the money needed to construct fortified defenses. Ukrainian soldiers are abandoning their posts and waving white flags and deserting in record numbers. Oh, but Ukraine is willing and they have noble causes right? Turning a blind eye to Ukrainian war crimes too eh?

At a certain point, things will get so expensive, people will simply stop buying things. Restaurants will lose business, less money spent on entertainment, travel, the list goes on. I've already seen some restaurants in my area close because they simply priced people out of coming to eat there. The current trend doesn't seem sustainable to me.

Apparently DEI hiring by Biden caused the helicopter crash

Even though Trump moved to defund air traffic control & safety protocols last week.

Its all just one big joke to them

I saw this, apparently he is even blaming Obama!

It is extremely sad that he is making a complete political show out a tragedy. His supporters should be truly ashamed of themselves, oh wait, they're still probably drinking the orange koolaid.

They asked him if he'll visit the crash site

He said, where? The water?

He's an ass man

Completely dissociated and disconnected from reality.

You are really delusional. Deny what you want, but when Ukraine starts forcing 18 year olds into the army by force as they have forced all the other soldiers that have died on the front already, you'll probably still deny reality for what it is.

They won't admit you're right even in the face of evidence.

Keep it up Kosmos. We need more informed people on this site. Too many kids band together and act like normal people are the nutty ones for focusing on facts.

That said, did you mean 800K+ casualties instead of deaths?

I love this photo. So true.

How many eggs in this box ? I mean 10 dollars for 15 or what ?
