

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: High Quality Posts and Low Quality Posts.

Novo - January 29, 2025, 3:56 am

What is a high-quality post? How does one make a high-quality post? What is the boundary between high-quality and low-quality?

After looking around the forum, I think the difference is that high-quality posts are longer posts with easily readable information.

Low-quality posts are short posts with information unimportant to the subject or long posts with no useful information.

Is this post a LQ post, or a HQ post?

Novo - January 29, 2025, 3:59 am

(Jan 29, 2025 04:57 AM)Sox Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) High-quality is a hard thing to describe.

If I had to take my best guess, I would deem this thread one of the higher-quality threads.

I hope I was able to answer your question on this HQ Wednesday!

Thank you! I agree with you on what you said. Post Quality is very hard to describe.

We should create sort of a algorithm which accepts posts, and decides based on post attributes.

berryfill12 - January 29, 2025, 8:23 am

im a high quality post. yes

TrackPro+ - January 29, 2025, 1:54 pm

Here's my take on a high quality vs low quality post.

Heuristics of a high quality post: Relates to the subject posted

Can grasp user engagement Relevant to modern information

Offers assistance Offers more information (such as a relevant question)

Heuristics of a low quality post:

Has no substance Does not relate to the subject posted

Mingle-mangle of different words that makes no sense

Flan. - January 29, 2025, 5:17 pm

I would consider this post to be a high-quality post because it provides a clear explanation of the differences between high-quality and low-quality posts. Keep up the good work!

Foxy Proxies Ltd - January 29, 2025, 5:51 pm

AI Quote: According to our future replacement at chatgpt:

A high-quality forum post is clear, engaging, and valuable to the community. Here are the key elements that define a top-tier post:

1. Clarity & Structure

Concise Title: A descriptive, specific title that summarizes the post's content.

Logical Flow: Organized thoughts with proper paragraphs, headings (if allowed), and bullet points.

Proper Formatting: Use bold, italics, or code blocks where needed for readability.

2. Value & Relevance

Useful Information: Adds something meaningful to the discussion—insights, solutions, or well-thought-out opinions.

Well-Researched: Provides references, sources, or links where necessary.

Relevance to the Community: Aligns with the forum's topic and interests.

3. Engagement & Tone

Conversational but Respectful: Avoids being overly formal but remains polite and professional.

Encourages Discussion: Ends with a question or invites others to share their perspectives.

Positive & Constructive: Avoids negativity, trolling, or inflammatory language.

4. Accuracy & Originality

Fact-Checked Content: Avoids spreading misinformation.

Unique Perspective: Adds personal experience or insight rather than just repeating common knowledge.

Minimal Jargon: Tailors language to the audience to ensure accessibility.

5. Proper Grammar & Spelling

Typos and grammatical mistakes reduce credibility. Proofreading before posting is key.

Pr0m3th3us - January 29, 2025, 5:55 pm

All of these threads are HQ and Im willing to get in a bareknuckle fight over it.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6272480&highlight=Shitpost+sunday>

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6272399&highlight=Shitpost+Saturday>

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6272539&highlight=Shitpost+Saturday>

SIM-5614280 - January 30, 2025, 10:53 am

High-quality is a hard thing to describe.

Spooky - January 30, 2025, 10:54 am

High quality posting could be simply chalked up into 2 things.

Staying on topic in a thread.

Posting more than a few words.

Foxy Proxies Ltd - January 30, 2025, 5:07 pm

Where is the HQ business successfully conducted thread?

Hackers - January 30, 2025, 5:29 pm

HQ posts help or inform users, invite others to share their thoughts, are in the correct section, are relevant, and are not spat out by AI.

An AI post could have higher quality information, but in a community I wouldn't call it HQ for your question.

Sometimes length is great, but having clear section titles is important. Having an accordion bbcode would be cool, but spoilers work.

StockX24 - February 1, 2025, 10:34 am

I consider this a low quality thread