

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Convo.php - Stanley Thread Notifications rate limiting \(per user\)

Hackers - January 30, 2025, 2:04 pm

I suggest a change to the convo thread notifications system.

It could be queued so it does not instantly reply, which could be better if anyone has a habit of making threads at certain times of the day.

Alternatively, perhaps there should be a general rate limit so it doesn't notify more than 3 threads per user, per hour - or similar, even as low as 1 per hour, or maybe with a different frequency like 5 per day.

A 3rd option could be for Stanley to actually not instant notify at all, even on a queue. Instead, it could batch thread notifications for 5-10 threads at a time, or at least once per hour.

This might not be the biggest priority, but worth mentioning.

Py_Dev - January 30, 2025, 2:05 pm

NERD, HEY EVERYONE THIS GUY IS A NERD!

Hackers - January 30, 2025, 2:05 pm

(Jan 30, 2025 03:05 PM)Py_Dev Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) NERD, HEY EVERYONE THIS GUY IS A NERD!
100%
yes.

Omniscient - January 30, 2025, 2:17 pm

If someone is spamming it's actually better that those in Convo know so threads can be reported.

Syndicate - January 30, 2025, 2:21 pm

(Jan 30, 2025 03:17 PM)Omniscient Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If someone is spamming it's actually better that those in Convo know so threads can be reported.

Exactly! 95% of my reports that I submit are from seeing a thread, opening it right away, reading it and seeing if it's junk or not

Hackers - January 30, 2025, 2:22 pm

(Jan 30, 2025 03:21 PM)Syndicate Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Exactly! 95% of my reports that I submit are from seeing a thread, opening it right away, reading it and seeing if it's junk or not
Ahhh this is actually very true

I've done this a few times.

Hmm. This does seem like a huge benefit.

And realistically if I'm going to post 5 threads about similar topic I can just start combining things to not bother people.