Thread: Whats the Most Useless Yet Fascinating Fact You Know?

Schiphol - January 30, 2025, 3:10 pm

We all have those random facts stored in our brains that serve no real purpose but are oddly interesting. For example, did you know that octopuses have three hearts, and their blood is blue? Or that a day on Venus is longer than a year on Venus?

What's the most useless but fascinating fact you know? Drop your best ones! ?

King of hearts is the only one without a mustache
The inventor of the pringles chips is buried in one of their cans
The guy reading this is bored asf

Cleopatra, the last active pharaoh of Ancient Egypt, lived closer in time to the invention of the iPhone than to the building of the Great Pyramid of Giza.

Think about that for a moment. The pyramids are ancient, right? But Cleopatra lived much later, and her era is closer to our modern age than it is to the time when those colossal structures were built.

I love random facts! Did you know that honey never spoils? It can last for thousands of years without going bad. Nature is full of fascinating quirks like that. ?

Some numbers are more likely to appear than others, so when you commit fraud you need to have at least 30% of made up numbers that start with the number one in order to not get caught ?, thanks to the Benford's law

Oh my gosh, I have a collection of useless facts, lol. Here's one:

Your fingernails actually grow faster on your dominant hand. This is because you use that hand more often, which increases blood flow and delivers more nutrients to the nail beds. Additionally, the frequent use can cause tiny micro-injuries that trigger faster nail regeneration. So, more activity leads to faster nail growth!

The Anglo-Zanzibar war was the shortest war in history and only lasted 38 minutes.

Pretty much, that's basically what severe ulcers are; the acid eats into the stomach wall. Definitely not a fun way to go!

Sounds like a nightmare, hopefully we'll never experience anything like this.

I thought of another one.

Austria has an office for tourists who thought they were going to Australia lol
