Thread: Elon Musks team is literally 19-25 year old children

Hackers - February 4, 2025, 5:27 am

This is who Musk trusts to execute his demands, with full access to the federal treasury system and other software.

I for one am not retarded enough to think this is even remotely acceptable or normal.

Weirdos

Quote:One is a 19-year-old college freshman and heir to a popcorn fortune. Another was hosting Model UN sessions in 2019 and a third was given money by his parents to invest in stocks while at his high school in Silicon Valley.

The world's richest man lashed out at an X account which suggested the six young men, who now have access the Treasury Department's payment system, among other things, should be "paid a visit" by FBI agents.

It's not like nepotism isn't already a thing. Rich folks giving rich kids their opportunities. I didn't happen to see if you mentioned what college/study they participated in? What kind of background they have other than rich parents?

I'm not saying these giys are in fact great. I didn't know who they were until you decided to obsess over young men and put their pictures here.

Anyways, to give them the benefit of the doubt: in my early 20's i was money retarded. But that wasn't the case for every other person around me. Some were pretty smart, "bootstraps blah blah" and got into real estate, active trading or were just responsible and had a solid savings. But i lived check to check for no reason.

Point is some people do know what they are doing.

We are in a the spot we are in because whatever was happening wasn't working. Might as well try something new right? As long as they don't go redirecting the budget to buy roblox giftcards idgaf. They're lucky by their parents status, and thats nothing new. If anything theyve got more experience of the bat.

Again, im not bending over for these guys, but you are complaining about age but probably also pissed off dei is terminated.

You make a lot of assumptions about me lol

Thanks for your input

I do get too wrapped up in thinking theres only two sides with only specific opinions.

I gotta chill out on the internet politics

There's definitely a middleground.

I am against a few things very strongly, but ultimately I'm probably closer to being red than blue on many other issues. It's just that the main issues I do care about probably do lean towards blue, so I think many people here assume i am just a diehard democrat which I absolutely am not.

Beherit - February 4, 2025, 7:46 am

Well, it could be worse. They could have been women...

Oh, he has his young women too, they're just raising his babies instead of raising hell on the treasury

Quote:Elon Musk, the world's richest man, believes in the "pronatalist" movement that advocates for having lots of kids. As the father of 12 children with three different partners, he certainly seems to practice what he preaches.

Before I get accused of making this up out of some partisan hatred for Elon Musk, I'd like to say:

- I used to idolize him, follow his talks, and I read a few biographies about him
- Elon is very open about his mission to impregnant women and have as many kids as possible
- I don't think Elon would deny that he spends most of his time away from his children

Jamika - February 4, 2025, 7:55 am

Isn't this considered exploitation of children? Hahahahaha

Haha someone should call him a pedo for not inviting other adults to help with the mission, just like he accused that guy of being a pedo for not accepting SpaceX's help to rescue those kids in the cave.

outcome:

- guy was not a pedo
- kids were rescued from cave
- Elon Musk's unraveling is said to have started roughly around this point, at least from public's standpoint.

Flan. - February 4, 2025, 8:14 am

Seems like Musk is taking some interesting risks with who he trusts. Hopefully everything works out okay in the end.

Lmao I mean I'd join if I was offered the job

But I'd also sabotage anything I deemed unconstitutional and a threat to our nation.

No, you're right and it's called nepotism and it's illegal in the U.S.A if a company or government agency does this. The company needs to have more than 11 employees to make this illegal. However, every company and governmental agency is doing it. They openly admit this by telling college students you need to network. Which is the exact definition of nepotism. They only hire people they know.

Yeah I really wonder:

These are the most qualified people?

And they're all 25 or under?

The chances of that...

I agree with you but I hope and wish these kids are super smart. I would love to see every saying these 19 year old's don't know shit.

Then they get to work and everyone is like OMG they fixed everything and did a better job that a person with a PHD and 10 years of work experience can do... lol

I just wan to see this to get a good laugh...lol

If that can happen, yeah of course I'll celebrate it.

As of right now though, it seems like they're more likely to end up with felonies than resumes from this.

Time will tell, but I think it's highly likely with the way things are going, even if it's charged in 4+ years within the statute of limitations instead of soon.

Kinda hard when you hammer on the POTUS a lot, ?

I also don't see a point in making threads about things I like about Trump, of which there are a few things.

I prefer to post threads where one of the following is true:

1. I can learn something

2. I can teach something
3. Laughs

I cannot say I whole heartedly agree but I can say, I'll agree on the latter and do enjoy the laughs. I enjoy reading many of your threads even if I don't reply.

All I want to do at the end of the day is have any % of the information/etc reach parts of the community who may otherwise not see it.

Maybe that's an agenda, maybe it's just my temporary interests, or maybe it's both. But if you are having some laughs, that's a win too.

Complain if he hires someone

Complain if he doesn't

Then complain if they're overqualified

Then complain if they're under-qualified

Complain if any of them are rich already

Complain if they are poor (they're being taken advantage of clearly)

Complain if they're asian, white, black

Complaining about everything but the job getting done am I right?

Who cares who it is? Are they qualified and can they execute the tasks assigned?

If the worlds richest dude thinks so then...idk what to tell you lol

I agree with your argument here. If a rich and more than experienced guy thinks these guys are capable of the job, then most likely they are. Elon didn't make his fortune because he makes bad judgement calls.

7 - February 5, 2025, 9:29 am

I think it's great he hires fresh talent and modern minds.

Also, when it comes to employment it's better to be able to mold the employee rather than employ someone who already thinks they know everything and has their own way of doing things.

I think these kids/young adults have been given a great start to be able to work on such innovative projects mrjeff - February 26, 2025, 7:09 am so far the internet has thought me something never use age as a deciding factor when it comes to stuffs like these you have no idea what they are capable of excuting

Chorozon - February 27, 2025, 2:23 pm

Aren't like 90% of all the huge hacks done by people in the same age range O.o
