Thread: [\[Community Alert\] Lowlife scammers on the Prowl !](#)

darkterror - February 6, 2025, 5:48 am

Some of the lowest lives among us are trying to scam people. DO NOT trust or engage with these pathetic fraudsters. They use manipulative tactics to lure victims, often making big promises about money.

Stay safe, stay smart, and report any suspicious activity!

It's not just Russians - unfortunately, every country has individuals who resort to these shady tactics and promises for quick buck.

If this is not a scam op, then clearly explain the process.

Radi - February 6, 2025, 7:57 am

I can't believe that people are still trying to attempt this method of scamming after so many years that everyone has seen these and even meme's about these things. How is this still a thing and the English gets worse and worse every time I see one of these? They always sound urgent and end with loads of money. Good thing you called it out since we are getting new members on the forum so they can see who to avoid and what to look out for.

Agreed. Sliding into dms on a new account isn't exactly the way to build up business :p

Especially if it was unsolicited.

90% of Europe and 99% of the USA (credit card debt). 100% of Russia/Asia/Australia etc...

And before some Aussies come at me, talk to me when 1 of my money units isnt worth 15000 of your money units. Same to you Canada, don't think i've forgotten about you.

You've got Luxembourg, Switzerland and even Norway? literally are the richest countries right now in the EU, have you seen the cost of living there + working class, it's insane compared to somewhere like "China" or even the UK lol.

Compared to nothing, really.

There is no country in the world, where the working class can work a job and easily afford a house.

But no one is ready for my solution.

Well I mean, literally all depends on the country or whatever, many countries have people working "class" a live comfortable, VERY rare, but I feel like that's why the countries I mentioned are known to be "richest" due to living/work.

Sadly, none of the mentioned countries make it possible for the men to work a job and keep his wife and 2 kids at home.

That was possible in the 60s, but due to corporate greed not anymore.

Eat and expropriate the rich.
