Nuts! Looks like the site is now down for me.

I just saw that he actually had his own Superbowl ad telling people to go to the site, LOL.

Radi - February 11, 2025, 6:15 am

I think the guy is bipolar for sure as well as using some type of substance that is causing these crazy episodes that he goes on. The issue no one in his inner circle is going to tell him no or try to stop him since they are most likely benefiting from him and so why would they stop their money cow. Any common person doing 1/3 of the things he has done would have had their life completely ruined and would not be able to even get a job anywhere.

Shopify took down his site today and instructed all support staff to answer "no comment" if asked about the swastika shirt.

Omniscient - February 11, 2025, 8:22 am

I don't see the big deal. People wear Che, Stalin, and Mao shirts just fine in America. The hypocrisy is unreasonable. Literally High School and College students can wear a Che shirt and get zero problems but one Nazi symbol and "OMG OMG OMG..."

Also, disappointed it's just a plain white shirt with the symbol. If he did something stylish I'd consider buying just to be provocative. Would be perfect rally shirt.

EDIT: In the shopping section of Google, not one Nazi shirt for sale. I searched Mao, Che, and Stalin and could buy them easily shopping via Google. You can get them on Ebay even. Just incredible the power to do that. If you think America is FREE, you are wrong. We are under control and censored from truth, honesty, and freedom.

I don't know how others feel but I personally would have issues with the other shirts.

I don't think anyone should be glorifying the murder of what is millions of people.

Quote:Mao is considered one of the most significant figures of the 20th century. His policies were responsible for a vast number of deaths, with estimates ranging from 40 to 80 million victims of starvation, persecution, prison labour, and mass executions, and his regime has been described as totalitarian.

Quote:During the guerrilla campaign, Guevara was also responsible for the summary executions of a number of men accused of being informers, deserters, or spies.

Quote:American historian Timothy D. Snyder stated that Stalin deliberately killed about 6 million, which rise to 9 million if foreseeable deaths arising from policies are taken into account.

Maybe there are people selling shirts, but I think most of the people who are rightly upset at Ye's Nazi shirt would also be upset at a Che, Mao, or Stalin shirt. I can only speak for myself in saying that I have no hypocrisy on this topic - all of these shirts should be banned from US markets for promoting dictatorships/tyrants/killers.

That goes right in line with Fascist and Marxist thinking. Ban, censor or make illegal anything you don't like. That's not suppose to be America. If I want to sell Nazi shirts, I should have that right to do so. That's the POINT Ye is making when people ask why he's doing something like this. There is outrage he's selling it but WHY? It's just a fucking shirt.

Well, not banned on a federal level. I am a Shopify & BigCommerce partner though and wouldn't be upset if they had something in their ToS.

That said, not sure how it works because they are public companies.

But no - I do not mean a federal or state censorship law. I wouldn't support that.

I do however support the right for companies & citizens to cancel, boycott, or otherwise prevent certain things on their platforms.

There's always people who take it seriously though... it's a 'provocative' piece to you (???), its someone elses justification for being hateful. My Dad wears a trump hat and we live in the UK. So everyone avoids him and gives him dirty looks. Not because hes wearing a Trump hat, but because he's deliberately trying to go out of his way to make a point when 99% of people seriously don't give a fuck.

I avoid everyone who is deliberately trying to go out of their way to be a shit head because that's a bigger reflection on their personality than anything else. Like the one spastic in class who wouldn't shut the fuck up so the rest of us can learn. Saying all that I still bought my Dad novelty Trump socks for christmas because I know he likes it and I have never once told him to take off his Trump hat even though I get dirty looks too.

If even 5% of those things are true you're really in an uphill battle here brother.

Would it make sense to have someone who's openly calling themselves racist, called themselves the modern Jim Crow, openly calls out black people turn around and start selling Klansman hoods and suddenly it's because they're just being "provocative" or making some sort of statement about free speech?

Honestly nodes ran better defense for Kanye by just calling it a Swastika, you're outright acknowledging / referring to it as Nazi symbolism and saying you want to wear it to be provocative lol. So I suppose you're not even making the case that Kanye's trying to make any sort of statement in the vein of taking power from what is and was a very common symbol across many cultures in the world. You just wanna wear the "Nazi symbol" and be edgy or something.

My opinion? The most annoying thing is Kanye has made a lot of unique / interesting products through Yeezy. I don't know why he has to go on crashout campaigns like this every couple years now. The Yeezy pods were pretty cool. His shoes sold very well but I never personally owned a pair. He does have an eye for fashion and a level of creativity in that realm but he reverts to whatever this is lol.

This is Kanye being angry that people in the music industry that were the businessmen and not the musicians made a lot more money off his music than he did and a lot of them happened to be Jewish, so he's being nasty about that.

Yeah, same thing. He doesn't like being told what to do and he shouldn't have to. His point is that a certain group controls what people say and do. You might not like that as his message, but that's exactly what it is. It's exposing the truth of who really controls this country.

Quote:His storefront was taken down by Shopify, Shopify as a company has no responsibility to facilitate the sale of products they feel might be damaging to their image / bottom line, there's no way you even disagree with that and if you do you're just being stubborn.

Our laws are very specific about what is protected speech and what's not.

Some exceptions that might apply here:

Incitement: Speech that encourages people to break the law, especially violence

Defamation: Speech that harms someone's reputation

False advertising: Dishonest or misleading advertising

Speech integral to criminal conduct: Speech that is part of a criminal act

It's false advertising because he suggests that Nazi symbology is acceptable and based in real complaints against Jews, but there is no way to say all Jews are_ without being antisemitic. No group can be generalized without falsehood.

He is guilty of defamation for same reason.

His intentions are to incite a social uprising and hatred towards Jews.

I don't think freedom of speech applies to Ye here.

Not even sure what point you're making. Also, WWII is way more complex than simply Hitler being responsible for the whole thing. I don't think you've studied enough of it imho. Because the more you look into pre-War Germany and how things were going, Hitler or someone like him was inevitable. It's just like Trump in that The People want a champion to help them push back. This is so true throughout history. Hitler lost WWII but he was winning more than losing most of the time. Chancellor in 1933. It really wasn't until Battle of Stalingrad and his commitment of troops to Russia (to destroy the Marxists) did he lose.

I'm a pretty big Chapelle fan I just don't know what you're talking about in particular or what "they" did to him means. If you're referring to people not understanding how someone could turn down 50 million at the absolute peak of their career when they were dominating a timeslot on national cable, it does seem wild right? Chapelle is actually a wise person though, agree or disagree with him he is far far far smarter than Kanye West. He had a vision long past signing with Comedy Central for 50 million and it all worked out for him in the end no? He returned with the Netflix specials and did insanely well for himself and was allowed to say whatever he wanted. I was fairly young during the height of Chapelle's refusal to resign and I'm having a hard time finding any articles saying he was smoking crack or whatever but I do know Chapelle has said, that was what was being said about him.

But I mean he wasn't blackballed ultimately? He's hosted SNL a few times now which is as mainstream as you can get, while simultaneously speaking his mind on Netflix, both of which I guarantee have traces of the spooky jews right? What's the bigger point here, I'm not trying to be a dick I just don't know what the comparison is. Kanye is out here /acting/ crazy making crazy rants. Dave Chapelle was accused of being crazy when in reality, he was not.

Just remembered he also got the rights to the Chapelle Show back from Comedy Central even after calling them out in a short YouTube special after they put it up on streaming without his approval. If anything this was the system absolutely working with him on every level?

Chappelle is intelligent. He was way too smart to start saying openly who the people giving him problems were. Kanye obviously isn't as smart and decided to be vocal, so now he's screwed. Isn't there a difference though between "black lives matter" and "only blacks matter, we should kill all whites?"

I understand what you're saying, but I don't think BLM and Nazism are comparable. One did the holocaust and the others did some protests & tweets.

BLM also was more of a social movement, hashtag, etc. There were some organizations too, but it was not really on the levels of the entire Nazi regime which had factories, transportation, and military operations specifically designed to make sure only Nazi lives matter*.

All in all, people are free to do whatever they want to do.

Because the more you look into pre-War Germany and how things were going, Hitler or someone like him was inevitable. It's just like Trump in that The People want a champion to help them push back. This is so true throughout history. Hitler lost WWII but he was winning more than losing most of the time. Chancellor in 1933. It really wasn't until Battle of Stalingrad and his commitment of troops to Russia (to destroy the Marxists) did he lose.

Probably taking this off-topic.

For some reason people think that only six million Jews were killed by Nazis, but the Nazis killed all sorts of other people such as Romani, the disabled, gays, black people, Polish people, people who hid Jews all as part of his eugenics programme, up to at least eleven thousand were killed as part of his eugenics programme.

I wasn't blaming Hitler for all the deaths of World War II lol Mussolini and the Japanese also did a lot. lol

But yes I know Germany had crazy, crazy inflation and people thought Hitler would save them from that. They needed someone to fix inflation they didn't need someone to come in with a policy of eugenics and have all kinds of people tortured to death because he'd decided they were inferior.

And Che is not a hero, but people who feel poor and think Marxism would balance things out will buy his photo on a t-shirt. Bleah. Or they think it's edgy. Or they are anti imperialism.

Anyway it's not really off topic because Kayne keeps promoting someone who had people tortured to death in concentration camps because he's angry at music industry businessmen [many of whom are Jewish] getting most of the money from music. It's pretty disgusting that he shows his rage over that by cheering about someone who had millions of people tortured to death.

Kayne is bipolar and that accounts for a lot of what he does though, but regardless he's let his bitterness about music industry businessmen turn him into a major racist.

I in no way support this ideology. I do however believe in freedom of speech, and him saying  You to everyone by doing this - is indeed funny

Since we're talking about facts here and misconceptions...

You are correct! The Nazis killed around 11 million people or so total, and only slightly more than half were Jewish.

This is where the quote "first they came for... then they came for me... " comes from.

Quote:Martin Niemöller (1892–1984) was a prominent Lutheran pastor in Germany. In the 1920s and early 1930s, he sympathized with many Nazi ideas and supported radically right-wing political movements. But after Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933, Niemöller became an outspoken critic of Hitler's interference in the Protestant Church. He spent the last eight years of Nazi rule, from 1937 to 1945, in Nazi prisons and concentration camps. Niemöller is perhaps best remembered for his postwar statement, which begins "First they came for the socialists, and I did not speak out..."

Lets also never forget that we have a huge population of people that think Stalin / Soviets were the heroes of WW2. Not quite.

In fact, they killed millions of people illegally before joining with the Allies to go against the Nazis.

Before then? They had an agreement with the Nazis to not fight each other.

This only changed because Hitler sent forces after Soviets, not because the Soviets had some sort of moral epiphany.

So when I hear Putin talk about how they saved Europe or similar, I just think it's one big joke.

Similarly when I hear about Putin's goal to restore the glory of Russia, I could not give less of a fuck because he's essentially idolizing Stalin's power.

The Soviet Union is gone for good reason. Any effort to go back to anything like those times is pathetic and should be treated like an unreasonable request.

They were perfectly fine exterminating people and Soviets were more like Nazis than not. Same bullshit, different flag.

1. The Great Purge (1936–1938)

Stalin's political repression led to the execution, imprisonment, and forced labor of perceived enemies.

Estimated Deaths: 700,000–1.2 million executions, plus millions sent to the Gulag.

2. Gulag System (1930s–1950s)

Millions were imprisoned in forced labor camps for political and criminal offenses.

Estimated Deaths: 1.5–2 million before 1941.

3. Soviet Invasion of Poland (1939)

After the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact, the USSR invaded eastern Poland.
Estimated Deaths: 150,000–200,000 (military and civilians), including:
Katyn Massacre (1940): ~22,000 Polish officers and intellectuals executed.

4. Winter War (1939–1940)

The USSR attacked Finland to gain territory, facing heavy resistance.
Finnish Deaths: ~25,000 (military and civilian).
Soviet Deaths: ~126,000.

5. Soviet Occupation of the Baltics (1940–1941)

Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania were annexed, followed by mass arrests and deportations.
Estimated Deaths: 100,000–150,000.

6. Deportations and Repressions (1939–1941)

Stalin deported millions from occupied territories (Poland, the Baltics, Ukraine, etc.).
Estimated Deaths: 300,000–500,000.

Total Estimated Deaths:

Before joining the Allies in June 1941, Soviet actions led to approximately 3–5 million deaths, including purges, invasions, and forced deportations.

Did anyone see that video of the celebrities giving Kanye the finger with ScarJo and many others?

Well turns out that was AI generated.

<https://edition.cnn.com/2025/02/12/entertainment/scarlett-johansson-ai-video-kanye-west/index.html>

I don't really care what celebs think so I basically dismissed it but it's interesting to me that the video got spread quickly and was so well done. I wonder who made it?

EDIT: Oh in CNN article "The AI video was created by Ori Bejerano", who is an Israeli. Wonder if Mossad involved?
