Quote:As for Vladimir Putin, he is emboldened, he is going to declare victory no matter what. This can be expected no matter what the outcome is. Fortunately, the bravery of the Ukrainians and the allies who were with them, especially at the beginning of the war, deterred and defeated Vladimir Putin and prevented him from achieving what he wanted, which was the whole of Ukraine, - Hegseth said.

I think this is a great mindset to have. Even if they say they won, we know the true costs of their "alleged success".

Don't believe me? That's fine. Listen to Donald Trump, the President instead:

Quote:"They've lost millions of people. They've lost, in terms of soldiers, probably 1.5 million soldiers in a short period of time."

Trump is going in the right direction.

The myth that Russia succeeded has got to stop. They've lost hundreds of thousands of soldiers to casualties, depleted Soviet stockpiles, and damaged their economy. That's if you go off of conservative estimates. If you go off of suspected numbers, it's much higher and Trump himself said 1.5 MILLION casualties and he also said 800,000 KILLED - on Russias side alone.

Trump and I would agree that Russias losses are egregious. It's time to protect Russian citizens from the Putin regime and stop this war.

Unfortunately the propaganda will be thiqq with two Qs for questionable quantities as the Putin regime lies to the Russian citizens about true losses - and falsely declares victory.
