Thread: Seeking Remote Administration Tools \(RATs\) for Android Devices

stillworking247 - March 1, 2025, 7:33 pm

Hello everyone,

I'm looking for recommendations on Remote Administration Tools (RATs) that can be used for penetration testing and security research on Android devices. The goal is to assess vulnerabilities, particularly in terms of unauthorized access to banking apps, when the device is not actively being used by its owner.

I'm looking for tools that allow for full remote access and the ability to execute tasks, even when the device is idle. The tools should be reliable and easy to install.

Key features I'm looking for:

Full remote control of the Android device

Ability to execute commands and security tests remotely

[deleted]

Open-source or well-established tools trusted in the cybersecurity community

Easy installation and setup process

If anyone has experience with RATs that fit these requirements, I would greatly appreciate your suggestions.

Thanks in advance for your help!

(everything for education purposes only, i work for an cybersecurity firma, so need to test few things out ;-)

I would say "You and hundreds of other people, buddy," but you made the request quite clear. You're a fraudster looking for a banking Trojan. These are sold on cybercrime forums and the dark web for $$$$$. All you'll find on this non-crime forum is scammy Craxs reskins.

Bear in mind that banking apps are as secure as anything, and Android security keeps tightening.

If you're really working for a cybersecurity company they will be able to provide you what you're looking for.

Spending $$$$ for this is stupid, or maybe you're thinking we are stupid to believe you ?
