Malware Removal Team eXtended
Greetings, Hack Forums community!

We are proud to announce the creation of MRT-X (Malware Removal Team eXtended)—a modern evolution of the legendary Malware Removal Team \(MRT\) and HiJack This Team \(HJT\). Building on the strong foundation of malware removal expertise, MRT-X is here to expand the horizons of cybersecurity education and assistance.

MRT-X is dedicated to not only assisting users in removing malware but also empowering the community through advanced malware analysis, introduction to cybersecurity, informational threads and educational initiatives. Our goal is to bridge the gap between basic malware removal and the deeper understanding of cybersecurity threats.

With the increasing number of new members eager to venture into cybersecurity and seeking information, the MRT-X group will serve as a springboard for these individuals through numerous contributions to the forum and for their future endeavors.

[What MRT-X has to offer ?]

? Malware Removal Assistance ? As always, we will help users identify and remove malware, viruses, RATs, and other malicious software.

A structured and accessible process will be available for users to report infections and receive expert guidance.

? Malware Analysis and Research ? Dive deep into the world of malware with our team of analysts. We'll dissect the latest threats and share detailed reports to enhance community knowledge.

Learn how malware works, what it targets, and how to defend against it.

? Educational Tutorials Newcomers and enthusiasts can follow step-by-step guides to learn the basics of malware analysis.

Topics will range from understanding malware behavior to using tools like Ghidra, IDA Pro, and sandbox environments.

? Training and Certification ? Similar to the original MRT, applicants will be able to join as students and work towards becoming certified malware removal experts and analysts.

Help you prepare for your certificate examinations.

And maybe, one day, get an award like the MRT one ...

? Collaboration and Innovation Engage with like-minded individuals to discuss new tools, techniques, and trends in cybersecurity.

Work on collaborative projects aimed at creating innovative tools and solutions for malware defense.

Our Vision/Goal

MRT-X aims to be more than just a group—it's a movement. By combining hands-on assistance, deep malware research, and a commitment to education, we aspire to strengthen the cybersecurity capabilities of the Hack Forums community and beyond.

Stay secure,
MRT-X Team

Bastille - March 2, 2025, 2:59 am

I'm really glad that this project became real, a lot of things for the community are coming.

The original MRT had a lot of influence and popularity on HF, but I'm sure we'll make MRT-X better !

B3A - March 2, 2025, 4:03 am

Very good job you have done there.

Secrets - March 2, 2025, 7:23 am

It's a moment of nostalgia, and I'm glad to see you all taking the initiative to revive something truly great.

I'm looking forward to seeing even more contributions on HF. Very impressive!

blackrose_x0x0 - March 2, 2025, 8:06 am

I'm unfamiliar with the original group but this sounds like a great idea for a group and good for HF as a whole helping to educate others.

Also, really cool userbar too.

Awesome to see this become official on site again. Already such great talent and knowledge in the group as it is. The forum is lucky to have MRT eXtended to assist and guide members on the board.

This is a great group idea, glad to see that it has been brought back! It was extremely helpful back in the day, really excited to see how the new MRT-x turns out!

Honestly not a fan of the name, MRT/HJT is a thing of the past. This group isn't affiliated or associated with the old team besides one former member. With that said best of luck with it.

Why not come back to it? It means Malware Removal Team - eXtended because there's more to it than just malware removal we have tons of extra stuff besides just malware removal. I also redid the entire academy with an official award.

As someone who was an avid fan of HJT team and the work they did onsite, I have utmost respect to those in this group. The HJT team inspired my career into IT and cyber so to see others possibly get that same experience is very exciting. Happy to help if needed. Best of luck.

I know I've done some trainings on GeeksToGo in the past back when they made you decide between trainings here or there.

Wilmer - May 19, 2025, 11:43 am

Stinks that this is malware removal because one of my favorite aesthetics so far haha. I don't have any software knowledge though
