Do you guys find yourselves disliking humanity more and more as the years go by. How superficial they are, how dishonest they are, how stupid they are. The benefits of being around and having contact with people are decreasing more and more.

Deany - March 24, 2025, 7:22 am

Ever since I was born

Sounds like you around the wrong group. Surround your self with a solid group of mates and share experiences, and promise your stance will change.

Sounds like you could probably benefit from speaking to a professional, it's not nice to be alone in life, seek help, make friends and I promise it gets easier.

Agree with you ,people are more bad day by day and envious .They speak nice in your face but behind your back you dont imagine how bad they speak about you

Plus this days people are so envious these days and hate to see you succeed

Amelia Rose - March 24, 2025, 9:44 am

No, I pretty much hate humanity the same as I always have tbh

1337 - March 24, 2025, 1:28 pm

Yes , I agree with you on that , stupidity is increasing miserably in humanity

Bankie - March 24, 2025, 1:35 pm

Why did you give me a minus reputation for no reason??? I have done nothing wrong.

You can sit there with your 4000+ and feel good about yourself. Talk about disliking people .

I completely understand what you mean. Partly why I enjoy to be by myself most of the time. However it can become addicting, not having to deal with people becomes peaceful.

Yeah, I'm starting to feel this way as life goes on.

Yeah but you gotta be superficial if you're in sales

I have very little to do with anyone now, even though I was born pretty extroverted and unafraid to talk to anyone people just get upset with you for stupid and wrong reasons from stupid fantasies they make up in their head about you that they won't listen to the truth about, or because of gossip that they just assume is true with no evidence, so it's good not having to deal with it anymore.

I work entirely online so apart from the one loved one that I live with now, I only see people on Zoom and they're deferential to me on Zoom most of the time, so I usually don't have to worry about them either, although there is still the occasional idiot making up their own bullshit like getting offended that I put my legs up on my desk during Zoom. ?

I just dislike people, I come to find that chilling by myself and being with my pets is far more better than dealing with other peoples issues.

BerryPretty - March 25, 2025, 6:49 am

you have to stay solid and "be the change you want to see" no matter what, it's a challenge but succumbing to hatred is not an answer

Dude that's my whole life. The people you went to school with and the people you work with etc.. and the companies you have to deal with.

I noticed more and more as time goes on. I always have to fix a company that I am paying services from the to fix their problem and I have to do all the work and send it to them just to get them to agree and sign off on stupid shit. Even when you do all the dam work they will be like I am not sure about this and then have like a team of people look over it and then their manager approves it and let's them sign off on it.

It's like really... I pay you.. to give me a service and I have to turn around and do all the work to prove you guys fucked up.

This goes with insurance companies too.. but like you said the more you deal with different people the more you notice majority of the people are just flat out retarded.

I know this may sound strange, but I think it's the price of becoming an adult... You feel like you prefer being alone more and distancing yourself from the noise.

plops - March 25, 2025, 8:42 pm

You should find help if humanity makes you hate what you are.

wutangas - March 26, 2025, 2:02 pm

You just need few quality friends in your life, friends that you can be yourself around and that's it. It's not about quantity it's about quality, most of the people you think they might be your friends, will disappoint you in one way or another, but you will find few that will last and make you proud.

Crystal Lord - March 27, 2025, 12:20 pm

Thats all understandable but i think to embrace such mindset is too way depressive and self-destructive to progress in everyday's live, all people need each others, so better say that we do not like their actions instead of disliking people or humanity cause noone is perfect.

Yanix - March 28, 2025, 10:43 pm

It's easy to feel that way sometimes, but surrounding yourself with the right people and focusing on positive interactions can make a big difference.

200ok - March 29, 2025, 3:40 pm

no I relate to this so much.. my small town has nobody who's into tech.. other than old teachers I use to have back in school.. I'm always talking about the cyberwar that's going on right now and nobody wants to listen, I tell my parents, my girlfriend, my brother and everyone I really speak to and they shrug it off.. but if you dont get your tech skills up then you're gonna be one lost little dog.

even though most people are already them lost little dogs.

My stepdad was trying to call xfinity for some service's and he googled "xfinity's phone number" and he just clicked and called the first number that popped up. My girlfriend and I was in the other room and overheard him talking to this person through the phone, so me having this gut feeling, I go into the living room and listen to what he's saying and what they are asking him...

they basically were trying to tell him that he was paying waaaay too much money on the bills for cable and etc. after asking how much he IS currently paying then the person started asking more and more personal questions

I told him to hang up.. looked at the number he called and compared it to the number they tell you to call on their official website.. the area code matched up perfectly with the actual number, it was like a (855) number or something, but then when you look closely, the (855) was the only correct digits for the number so I gave him the correct number and he was able to proceed with what he was trying to do. (he was mad though because now he had to speak with a bot I think) but this can happen to anyone don't get me wrong, but you should always keep up with scamming trends and all that shit.

now the sad thing is.. im the only one in our family and my friend group that really keeps up with any type of csamming/hacking trends.
