Thread: South Park 27th season announced \(trailer\)

Bastille - April 3, 2025, 3:49 am

I miss the seasons with more than 20 episodes, and the clashes / dramas with the stars too. Over time, I feel like the producers/directors have toned things down.

I'm not really sure what to expect from this season — we can see P-diddy in the trailer, they may have regained a bit of their edge when it comes to targeting people involved in scandals — that's a good sign.

I might offend some of you, but I only watch South Park dubbed in French. I struggle with the American voices, the pitch of kid's voices is too high, and the jokes aren't always easy to understand in the original version when you're a non-native speaker / american citizen. I don't know if this season will be dubbed in French — it's been a bit complicated in recent years, I think.

Fingers crossed!

I'm not offended but I do feel sorry for you. French don't know comedy.

I've really enjoyed the recent stuff, too. I thought the Ozempic one was exceptional.
Still really relevant and scathing imho.

Weigh loss drug one was hilarious. Usually Matt stone and Trey Parker always have been pushing peoples buttons. I love it.

It is less fun and less genius, but it is for me still the most fun genius show ever

I was never really a fan of South Park, enjoyed Family Guy more. Haven't watched any of it for many years now though.
