Is Telegram premium not $3.99 a month and $28.99 dollars a year? It is for me. I'm located in the US, and now understand there could be pricing differences in other countries.

This is direct from Telegram. What is the purpose of paying you to do something that the provider offers cheaper?

Edit:

The original question wasn't meant to disrupt your thread, just seeking clarification on the pricing structure versus direct direct billing.

Having spoken with the seller, this service is geared toward members located in regions facing local banking restrictions, sanctions, or international payment limitations where purchasing direct through Telegram isn't an option. For users needing third-party payment fulfillment, that explains the pricing difference. GLWS.
