Thread: Horrific rape and incest video game tells players to be 'women's worst nightmare'

Wow, crazy this was on steam for some time.

Quote:Horrific rape and incest video game tells players to be 'women's worst nightmare' and 'never take no for an answer' - as furious users call for it to be banned

Quote:A horrific rape and incest video game has sparked fury by encouraging players to be 'women's worst nightmare'.

The game, titled 'No Mercy', centres around a protagonist who rapes his family members including his aunt and his own mother.

Players of the vile game are instructed to 'never take no for an answer' in their ambition to 'subdue' and 'own' women.

Despite its horrendous themes, the game does not have an official age rating and was available for sale on Steam, the most popular digital game store.

The game's developer, Zerat Games, published the game on Steam in March where children as young as 13 can make an account.

The game's page was restricted to users 18 and older, but it is trivial for users to lie about their age since no verification is required.

Outraged gamers launched a petition with over 40,000 signatures demanding its removal, while UK Technology Secretary Peter Kyle called the game 'deeply worrying'.

While the game has now been removed following massive international backlash, the hundreds of players who already purchased a copy will still be able to play it.

Quote:No Mercy describes itself as a '3D choice-driven adult Visual Novel with a huge focus on Incest and Male Domination'.

Players are encouraged to act out horrific sexual violence against women for their own entertainment and to 'never take 'no' for an answer'.

On its Steam page, the game proudly advertises that it contains violence, incest, blackmail, and 'unavoidable non-consensual sex'.

Screenshots of the game and a trailer featured on the page contain sexually explicit and disturbing content with few barriers to prevent children from accessing them.

Creating a Steam account requires the user to be over 13, and a card is needed to make purchases.

But, before the game was removed from Steam, LBC reported that users could purchase No Mercy for £9.99 simply by ticking boxes claiming to be over 18.

In the UK, physical game releases are required to be certified by the Games Rating Authority (GRA) under the Video Recording Act.

Under this law, the GRA is responsible for the classification of all game releases and has the power to refuse a game certification for release.

Quote:However, digital game releases are not covered by the Video Recording Act, and age ratings are largely optional.

Ian Rice, Director General of the GRA, told MailOnline: 'Most online storefronts such as those managed by PlayStation, Xbox, Nintendo and Epic Games choose to mandate PEGI ratings for all products listed on their store.

'Steam allows companies to display a PEGI rating if they have obtained one, but it does not mandate that a game receives a rating prior to release.'

Speaking to LBC, UK Technology Secretary Peter Kyle said: 'We expect every one of those [tech] companies to remove content as soon as they possibly can after being made aware of it.

'That's what the law requires, it is what I require as a secretary of state, and it is certainly how we expect platforms who operate and have the privilege of access to British society, and British economy, to do.'

Regulation of online video game content falls to OFCOM, the UK media watchdog, to which Steam has various legal obligations.

The regulator began its crackdown on harmful online content last month as part of the Online Safety Act but told LBC that it has not taken action in relation to No Mercy.

MailOnline has contacted OFCOM for further comment.

I don't know there's a lot of weird games out there.

I remember like 4 years ago on steam there was a game called Chinese restaurant tycoon where you run a restaurant but your chef gets to run around and if it sees a cat in the back alley he can kill it and cook it. This includes dog and also dumpster diving. Then the IRS and the ICE will randomly show up at your restaurant to audit you. If you're caught not paying taxes or if you have undocumented laborer you will lose employees and you can get a huge fine and lose all your money because the IRS takes it.

I only knew about this because it made the news that some Representative in congress from New York it was some Chinese lady that was born in the U.S that she demanded it be taken down due to racism to Chinese people.

Then there was a web game I downloaded and played it mocked that kid that shot up the women in cali.

I laughed my ass off hard because the whole point of the game is to walk around college campus and there's like 50 levels.

you start off at his apartment where you shoot and kill his roommates and then go leave the apartment and hop in a car to drive to college. As you drive you gain points shooting or killing women and running them over.

Every time you run over a woman or you shoot them dead he has a sound clip of him saying I am sexually attracted to girls.

It was an actual snippet of his real voice in one of his youtube videos.

It's hilarious because his voice is just clips he said in videos. When you die by the cops shooting you or a male bystander shooting at you.

He yells I don't know why you women aren't sexually attracted to me. I am the most handsome man.. I got these designer glasses and these designer jeans.

The game is just hilarious on the sound bites and it mocks him making him look like a total douche. There's also grunting noises he makes because you can ask any woman if he can have sex with him and most will say get the fuck away from me creep. He would make a grunting noise and will say like you will feel my wrath on this retribution day.

I couldn't stop laughing at how the game was designed. It was a single .exe file game.
