

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: I saved my friend's life risking mine - Share your experience

The Joker - April 17, 2025, 10:34 pm

Hi. I've saved a human life from imminent death.

This happened a couple of years back when my friends and I were playing in the beach.

We were 2 teams of 2 friends and the teams had to throw a ball and the other team had to catch it. We were all drunk and none of us knew how to swim.

All was fine until one of us started throwing the ball further into the sea. (Not sure who started it though)

In some time, the ball was thrown too far and one of us, (let's call him S) went in to fetch it. Out of nowhere, he started drowning and waving his hands. His teammate (let's call him V) instead of trying to save him, ran towards the shore.

Without even thinking for a second, I rushed towards S and gave my hand. The drowning man will always try to take someone with him.

Just like the saying goes, he grabbed my hand and I too lost my balance and couldn't feel the ground under my feet anymore. For a moment, I thought I was gonna drown.

Out of nowhere came a wave which pushed us a little towards the shore and I felt the ground. Immediately, I used all my strength and pushed the ground beneath and moved towards the shore. All this while S held onto my arm and didn't let go. Another wave helped us and we reached the shore without losing our lives.

It was one of the very few near death experiences I had experienced in my life and I saved a friend's life in the process.

S was very impressed and told this to all our friends. But in a few months, S and V became best friends.

When we reached the shore I asked V why he didn't try to help S and instead ran towards the shore for which he replied that he thought of getting help.

Has anyone had similar experiences in life?

Phantom_NiNja - April 18, 2025, 1:35 am

(Apr 17, 2025 10:34 PM)The Joker Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hi. I've saved a human life from imminent death.

This happened a couple of years back when my friends and I were playing in the beach.

We were 2 teams of 2 friends and the teams had to throw a ball and the other team had to catch it. We were all drunk and none of us knew how to swim.

All was fine until one of us started throwing the ball further into the sea. (Not sure who started it though)

In some time, the ball was thrown too far and one of us, (let's call him S) went in to fetch it. Out of nowhere, he started drowning and waving his hands. His teammate (let's call him V) instead of trying to save him, ran towards the shore.

Without even thinking for a second, I rushed towards S and gave my hand. The drowning man will always try to take someone with him.

Just like the saying goes, he grabbed my hand and I too lost my balance and couldn't feel the ground under my feet anymore. For a moment, I thought I was gonna drown.

Out of nowhere came a wave which pushed us a little towards the shore and I felt the ground. Immediately, I used all my strength and pushed the ground beneath and moved towards the shore. All this while S held onto my arm and didn't let go. Another wave helped us and we reached the shore without losing our lives.

It was one of the very few near death experiences I had experienced in my life and I saved a friend's life in the process.

S was very impressed and told this to all our friends. But in a few months, S and V became best friends.

When we reached the shore I asked V why he didn't try to help S and instead ran towards the shore for which he replied that he thought of getting help.

Has anyone had similar experiences in life?

No, but I did die 2 times and came back to life. Happened back in 2016. I had a horrible cough that I couldn't shake off from November until May.

I personally think it was the start of covid. In late October I noticed chemtrails of a commercial airline. There were 2 plane that crossed each other and the chemtrails made a hedge x in the sky right above my house. The chemtrail clouds lasted 1 month over my house. Which is very odd because normally it just takes about 5 to 10 minutes to disappear.

Anyones, In November I started having this cough that gotten worse over time. My parents cough it after me. In January my feet were ice cold and was going in and out of numbness. We had that polar vortex crap happening so outside was very very abnormally cold.

In February the numbness spread to my upper part of my legs. Then in March I couple feel my private parts. I felt it as if I was touching someone elses meaning no feeling wait down. I also had a high heart rate that would go up and then down. I would feel like I ran a mile sweating and then feeling sick. I was drinking monster energy drinks and red bull and i went cold turkey on it thinking maybe it was too much caffeine.

By May my face was drooping and my dad noticed this. HE then took me to the hospital where I waited 2 days to get admitted.

they tested me on everything known to man to then diagnose me with gurren barre syndrome.

I then was admitted and was given plasma aka healthy white cells to fix everything. So, I got discharged and I had to do rehab for 2 weeks to regain strength and nerves to my muscles Everything was fine ... my heart rate was fine. I then started again with the energy drinks.

I used to drink 3 but I cut that down to 1. So, after May I was doing great. Then it was horrible by August. One night at 2am I was up watching youtube video.

I out of nowhere felt cold and felt like I just got the flu. I felt sick and nauseated and cold. It was 73 outside it was hot and humid. So, it didn't make any sense as to why I got ice cold out of nowhere. I felt like I was dying. I then drank some gateraid and took a sleeping pill.

Thinking that I could just sleep this off. I went to bed and had what I thought was a trippy dream. I was in a youtubers apartment called gabby.

I walked up to her and whispered her name and she looks towards me and puts her index finger on her nose to make herself look like a pig.

I got startled and I back away and trip on some wires that she had for her lamp light or the shots. As soon as I hit the floor... I woke up in my bed with my whole body drenched in sweat. I get back up and went to my fridge and drank a cold gateraid. I didn't think much about this until 2 weeks later the youber posts a video on youtube saying that her apartment is haunted. I watch the video and then realized it was my exact voice.

I think knew that it wasn't a dream but I left my body and visited her apartment. I was technically dead. I had 2 experience like this.

Also don't know the youtuber personally and they have no contact to anyone around me. I have had 2 other yotubers experience the same with me visting them at certain locations in the spirit form.

The Joker - April 18, 2025, 7:38 am

Wow. That's some scary experience.

I never believed in chemtrails before. But I'm happy I never had to face it.

plops - April 18, 2025, 12:12 pm

(Apr 18, 2025 01:35 AM)Phantom_NiNja Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) May.

I personally think it was the start of covid. In late October I noticed chemtrails of a commercial airline. There were 2 plane that crossed each other and the chemtrails made a hedge x in the sky right above my house. The chemtrail clouds lasted 1 month over my house. Which is very odd because normally it just takes about 5 to 10 minutes to disappear.

Personally man, I have started to hire homeless guys to stand on my roof and wave 20x30 purafilters to keep the chemtrails away. Something to think about.

Years ago I was riding a motorcycle on some back, one lane, roads. Two kids were on their bicycles and for whatever reason one split the road(im assuming to give me room?) But it was too late and i had to swerve off into the tilled dirt.

Flew off quite a bit, fucked up a lot of my left side. But I had a quarter pound of weed in my bag so I asked if they were good and got back on my bike. It barely made it home. Put my pot away and went to the hospital.

When I was flying I thought I might die. It was kind of a trip.

PSNReady - April 18, 2025, 4:40 pm

Wow, that's an intense story! You acted incredibly bravely and instinctively. It's a shame about the aftermath with S and V, though. People are strange sometimes. Glad you both made it out safely!