Thread: Beginner Tools

Depicide - April 26, 2025, 5:13 pm

I see a lot of new people on the site asking for a start to resources and getting started.

My personal opinion is getting use to OSINT tools. The reason being that these tools are usually beginner friendly.

Precisely the sort of thing I was looking for, appreciate your service man!

I am primarily interested in analytical research and tools to help me construct my own personal ai powered investigative and academic assistant. Would you happen to have any other resource lists, guides, or tools that you would recommend? I'm a complete beginner in the digital automation and coding world, though I'm a fast learner and easily understand complex and esoteric concepts.
