Thread: Looking for a prepaid crypto card

SIMBIYOT - May 12, 2025, 10:17 am

KYC is not a concern. Are there any prepaid cards I can use outside of Binance to pay with crypto?

Not entirely sure if its worldwide but if KYC is not a concern ByBit card is pretty good: Regular promotions for new accounts, cashback rates okay (though for regular customers capped at $10 a month), good crypto -> fiat conversion fees, no bullshit additional topup or card issuance fees.

It kind of sucks how USA, they're not much websites that have crypto for card purchases. There's crypto.com but it sucks ass. Bitpay, im on a waiting list but it's been almost 2 years being on that list. They never called out my name. ByBit isn't offered in US. Really lowkey shit.

I used to use Wirex, I think they still exist and are quite big now?

ShellPower - May 19, 2025, 6:28 am

I am using PST.net but i am not sure if their fees compare these days (they also now ask KYC for most regions)

Which regions require KYC? What about their fees?

Is it available in EU?

I have tried few EU countries all asked for KYC, i also tried my home country which was no-kyc until recently and now they ask for it as well.

US is completely banned in my opinion, i accidentally was with a US proxy once and couldn't finish registration highly recommend <https://www.solcard.cc/> you load up solana, can use it nearly anywhere. No KYC.

g63g63 - June 1, 2025, 6:16 pm

I always use Sol card. It's KYC free

I just created an account. Being kinda skeptical. Does the Visa Card work for virtually anything?
