Unless you know there is not malware in the tools, I wouldn't post them. Just my two cents. That seems a bit LQPing by throwing a compilation of programs/tools and not even knowing yourself if they are infected or not.

Edit: For those that do find this post useful, of course... Thank OP.

I know that the tools has no malware but since this forum flag a lot for random reasons i decided to leave a warning. The idea beyond the development of this pack of tool was that i was profitable with a mail bomber called Email SPAM Prank since then i have been developing tools to get sells. Non work :(

I'm not knocking you, I just wish members when they would post compilation's ... They would do it in a more careful manner. Some people that read these threads unfortunately are not as skilled as some others to fully make sure program's aren't infected. That's all. But again that's my opinion and it may not be the same as others.

if the tools are helpful and members here like it/want it, I totally apologize.

I wouldn't share those tools unless you're sure they're malware-free. It seems a bit like low-quality posting to compile and post programs without knowing if they're infected.
