Hello! The basic checkers that are included are:

- Random SMTP
- AWS / SEN / SNS
- Sendgrid
- Sendinblue
- Twilio

You can also add your own checkers with a regex & python code :)

Hey, no unfortunately

It's an smtp/aws/api cracker

Chornaya Magiya - July 17, 2025, 12:24 pm

So far as i know aws smtp is not bruteforcable since by default they use long username and long pass with symbols it's not bruteforce, coldcracker looks for vulnerabilities in millions of urls to find configuration files or access to smtp/aws/api keys.

If anyone is looking to purchase this service then they need to use an escrow or a middle man. I will middle man any deal for anyone for free if they request it. The probability of someone getting scammed over a service like this posted by a member that is brand new is exponentially higher than someone who is reputable and known in the community.

Many times I have seen people purchase a 6 month L33T and scam for thousands of dollars. The initial upgrade purchase is nothing compared to the amount scammed.

Whoever uses this service BE AWARE OF THE RISKS. You can still use an HF contract and get scammed. Someone who does not give a shit about their account is likely to not care about getting closed.

I said he looks sketchy because of the reviews in his Telegram group it has nothing to do with him refusing to give out a vouch copy.

Considering the high prices hes charging, his overall marketing and user feedback should be strong across all platforms to prove he's legitimate.

Those Telegram reviews is same = as images to vouch copies of other forums. it have nothing to do with proving that he is legit.

His review group is created 3 days ago with some non english reviews [ seems boted ], cmon brother its nothing sketchy for u ?

Hello,

First matter of fact is that isn't this considered sales-trashing? leaving a negative reputation just because I did not offer a vouch copy to the user lol? I don't deem his profile as worthy of it because he has such a basic profile.

But still, I can offer both of you a vouch copy now, and you can test out the service for yourselves.

ColdCracker - July 23, 2025, 6:52 pm

Vouch copies are available, send me a message.
