Thread: What regret do you have in life?

junooo - July 18, 2025, 3:20 pm

Heya!! <3

I haven't had the time to really talk on here in a while.
Let's talk about something :)

What is the biggest regret you have in life?
And, if you could go back, would you change it or not?

Share your story. What's the regret that's stuck with you, and what have you learned from it?

I have many small regrets like buying snacks with money I don't have, some stupid things I said, not buying a bitcoin when it was still kinda cheap etc.

But, the biggest regret I think I have is that I ever started escorting. I don't know if I had many options back then, but I started when I had just turned 17, with a fake ID I had edited myself on my Samsung phone. It's stupid looking back at it, and honestly a wonder nobody caught me lol.

- I do regret that part of my life immensely. It shaped me in ways that still determines the paths I choose in life to this day. It catches me in general things, but also more intimate things. In both negative and positive ways. BUT, if I could rewind the clock, I don't think I would cut out that experience fully. I would just like to have myself start at a legal age instead :)

xclouded1 - July 18, 2025, 3:54 pm

My biggest regret is investing everything into my friends thinking they'll be here for the rest of my life, then they disappear and you wonder what it was all for.

Dystortion - July 18, 2025, 6:34 pm

Im no sure about regrets as such, more like I wish I did more considerations growing up and thought more clearly what I was doing. I've been on a grind coming to 11 years now on improving my skills and knowledge with regards to technology, it used to be hacking, now programming. I wish I had invested more into my learning which is crazy to think. 17 is crazy btw... did you charge extra lmao. Hopefully you didn't have bad experiences in related to that as opposed to just having an awful time

What is the biggest regret you have in life? Learning from this website how to social engineer , also how to abuse the Hotmail reset option back in the day XD

And, if you could go back, would you change it or not? Nope I learned a ton and self taught nope

Mech - July 18, 2025, 10:47 pm

I have a handful.

Online gambling with BTC in 2012 is one of them.

There are times where I think I regret something but every decision made, positive or negative lead me to who I am today.

Yeah, it is hard coming to terms that people leave. I hope all is well though.

Actually same here, I wish I had put more time into useful skills instead of the bs I did when I was a teen haha. I think many of us think that honestly.

And no, I didn't charge extra. I was abused, left alone, locked up and even drugged the first few times, but, you REALLY learn from those experiences haha. Another fun story is that I had a regular who's children and wife I met (who were all fine with that), and where I even slept with the guy whilst his wife slept 1 bed next to us..... NEVER AGAIN T.T

I was always looking for the next big thing, never stopping to enjoy the present. Now I see that those small moments were the ones that truly mattered.

Mech - July 19, 2025, 4:49 pm

I was a broke young man just looking to gamble legally. I was buying in at 10-20$. And I did that on and off for several months.

The price of BTC was right around 10$ then too.

I also played quite a bit on BustaBit.

Honestly I regret not buying the i9 and cheaping out and buying the intel 7 on my Pc , cause I would of been way better off buying the intel 9

?ystem - July 19, 2025, 10:26 pm

I sincerely regret not actually doing something about my natural inability to pay attention early enough. My attention span is less than the width of a single quark. I didn't consider it a problem until one of my best friends convinced me to try one of his ADHD meds, and all of a sudden I could actually fucking pay attention. So I reached out to a counselor regarding the experience at school, got tested and finally got the diagnosis. I'm not ashamed of my life before then because I had a lot of needed fun, but if I had just said something earlier than I'd have a better school record.

HerrWinston - July 19, 2025, 10:28 pm

Well we all have these moments we regret, i guess most here regret not investing into btc earlier, but i think apart from these wishes what couldve been done, i dont regret anything i have done, I always try to make the best out of every situation, sure sometimes it doesnt work perfectly, but i dont regret it i just accept and next time i will do it better.

BRICK - July 20, 2025, 1:08 am

My biggest regret is that I ever started gambling because I got ridiculously addicted to it and got into quite a bit of debt because of it. I have quit gambling but now I'm struggling to get out of debt and restart from square 1

That's probably the best way someone can look at it. I may not have become a BTC millionaire, but at least I had fun gambling for a few months.

Honestly, my biggest regret is joining the military — or more specifically, doing 19 years in the Canadian Navy. I'm finally being medically released this coming September 2. It's been a long, grueling road, both mentally and physically. The toll it's taken on me has been massive, and there were countless times I wanted out but felt trapped by the system, the culture, and the fear of starting over.

That said, it's a double-edged sword. While I regret a lot about the journey, I can't ignore the fact that I'm walking away with some major benefits. Veterans Affairs has come through big time, and I'm set up with a sweet indexed medical pension for life. On top of that, the military is covering the full cost of my education — I'm starting a 62-week Cyber Security Analyst program on October 27, all online. So while I wouldn't wish the struggle on anyone, I also know I wouldn't have access to the kind of long-term security and support I have now if I hadn't gone through it. It's a messed-up trade-off, but that's the truth of it.

Eran - July 22, 2025, 1:24 pm

No regrets. Each decision I have made has shaped me and brought me to where I am today. I am exactly where I need to be and I trust in divine timing.

Wasting so much time on things that weren't practical in adult life. Hell, half of my schooling was a complete waste, spending 8 hours a day as a child in a classroom is absolutely ridiculous.

Totally agree. So much of school felt pointless, especially when it didn't teach us real-life skills. Spending all that time in a classroom, just to grow up and not use half of it, really does feel like a waste.

It's crazy when you look into homeschooling and stuff these days too. Young kids need something like 30 minutes a day of dedicated learning. And as you become a teenager its something like 3 hours a day.

Yeah, it's kinda mind-blowing when you think about it. Kids really don't need hours and hours of structured learning every day to actually get it. Most of the school day is just filler, waiting, lining up, dealing with distractions. When learning is actually focused and tailored, like in homeschooling, it can get done way faster and actually stick better.

Yeah, I have really contemplated homeschooling my kids. The only problem is you really have to stick to it, and make sure they are actually learning. All the responsibility falls on you and not the teachers at the school.

So I guess my biggest regret is that I didn't work with myself sooner and let this happening for years

One of my biggest regrets is stealing — just small moments, but they stuck with me. I once stole candy from a store when I was a kid. And another time, I took a friend's homework to copy it and forgot to give it back. I think he ended up getting a D- in that class

I joined a little later in life. No regrets. Depending on where you are the cutoff age is pretty high. Not too late.
