Thread: What are the current things your most patient in life about?

HerrWinston - August 2, 2025, 2:03 pm

Yeah the question is above :D

Currently for me its learning python, and getting my health and previous body back that i lost when i was sick hahaha

Swiss - August 2, 2025, 2:03 pm for me... just waiting on my mid gf to cook me something.

It's awesome that you're focusing on both learning something new and getting your health back. Python is a great choice and easy to start with, but really powerful once you dig deeper. And seriously, respect for working on your body after being sick. That takes patience and consistency.

Thank you for the kind words my friend, it was indeed a big setback considering i was sick for about 4 months and my doctor just now allowed me to get back to the gym :D

Meh, nothing at all LOL. impatient asfk.

Deany - August 2, 2025, 9:55 pm

The anime expo things once a year . Love them.

XtremeDiscount - August 3, 2025, 4:45 am absolutely nothing lol

Honestly, I think I'm most patient with myself right now. Just trying to take things one day at a time, especially when it comes to healing and figuring life out. Not everything needs to be rushed, even if it feels like the world's speeding past.

I have an idea on Quantum tech, but I need a lot of time to learn everything and shape it better.

Will take time but I'm patient, this is most likely to become mainstream in the next 10 years.

I'd say I'm most patient with personal growth. Healing, learning, rebuilding yourself, it all takes time, and I've come to accept that some things can't be rushed, even when I want change to happen fast.

I have found out that I'm starting to become more resilient as a person. I'm very patient in all things in life and this is only improving.

That's really nice. It takes a lot of effort to adapt this mindset!

That's really great to hear! Building resilience and patience is such a powerful combination. It makes facing life's challenges a lot easier. Keep it up!

For me succeeding in my dream to travel around the world

Even if i struggle for so many years i dont give up

Radi - August 6, 2025, 8:08 am

What I am most patient about in life right now is getting that money so that I can take a long ass vacation and fully recover my batteries and travel a bit of the world.

Mech - August 6, 2025, 9:09 am

I think I almost have mastered being patient. I really do, I worked for years on trying to stay calm and collective regardless of how hectic or upset I am. I think it's probably one of my most valuable skill sets.

However, the one thing that still test my patience today... my kids. They know how to push the buttons too.

That's honestly impressive, patience is no easy thing to master. It takes real effort to stay calm, especially when everything's chaotic. And yeah, kids have a special talent for finding those last nerves! But the fact that you've worked on it so long shows real strength.

It truly is my biggest positive attribute. My wife can't stand it, doesn't understand how I can let things affect me so little.

The military has a lot to do with that numbness as well, I think.

That makes a lot of sense. Patience can be a superpower, especially when life throws chaos at you. The military definitely teaches you how to stay calm under pressure. It's impressive you've kept that steady mindset, it's not easy for some people!
