Thread: Sorry I don't have much to offer here \(value wise\)

Wish I knew "secret techniques" or "methods" that I can share with you guys, but I literally don't have much knowledge. only thing I've learned after wasting time trying to look for ways to earn money online, is that most of the money generation comes from you building up your skillset and brand, or building apps, websites, etc. stuff that people want and value.

Also, most of these skills can be learned online for free. The Internet is an untapped vast library of information that is such a gift to have. You can literally start an entire company or small business from knowledge available on the Internet.

it's not a big deal, it is ok if you don't have that much information, I was like you, and trust me, on HF when you talk with people and members, you will gain information.

Facts. It really all comes down to building skills and putting them to use. The internet gives you everything, you just have to take advantage of it.

Thanks for the love, my friends. I'm here because the community isn't full of toxicity either.

You're in the right place; this is a close-knit community filled with knowledge and great ideas.

Best thing you can do is learn along the way and share the experience you encountered on your journey.

We all start without the knowledge.

Oh_Well - August 4, 2025, 5:39 am

There's a lot of content here, so it might feel overwhelming.

Take some time to look around, find what interests you most, and start reading.

If something doesn't make sense, take a step back and look it up. It takes time but it's worth the effort.

Fortunately, there are guides for just about everything here.

Don't feel like you don't fit or anything, HF has good people!

ohsamiono - August 4, 2025, 6:57 am

A word of advice, if it's too good to be true then it most likely is. As in, people selling methods for $50 where you can make $500/day (and it's scalable).

I'm just on here for info bro don't worry

It's all good, you may not have any information of value right now.. but that's not to say that you won't have something in the future. You take what you learn from off here, use it to do something.. i.e. start a service, earn money, grow a social media account, start a group, start a website, grown a company, etc... whatever it maybe.

You will then learn more stuff outside of here, from your experience doing whatever it is you set out do.. and you can always come back here at a later date and share your experience. Even if whatever you set out to do wasn't successful, sharing your experience can help others to learn from your mistakes, so if they choose to set out on the same path.. they will know what things avoid. And if what you set out to do does end up being successful, someone can learn from your positive experience.

I've been reading this [\[Tutorial\] Understanding Crypters: How They Work to Hide Malware](#) !

It's pretty interesting and gives you some food for thought on how easy it is to download something malicious if you're not careful enough ?

Bro no need to apologize for learning. You are at the beginning of your journey compared to many guys here.

And everyone in life has different, speed, path and weather. Don't let that discourage you.

Once you learn and make money. Show the torch to others. Continue the cycle!

You're absolutely right. Especially when it comes to the speed part, people think they always need to rush to reach others, but it's not a sprint, it s a marathon! You just have to keep learning!

K4RM4 - August 16, 2025, 6:43 pm

I'm right there with you my friend. But I'm slowly learning. And having a really good time doing it.
