? Monero (XMR) & The Qubic Attack – August 2025 Lessons Learned ?

Hey fellow XMR Fam ?,

August 2025 has been one of the most dramatic months in Monero's history. Let's break down the situation with Qubic's mining takeover claims, what's being done (FCMP & dev improvements), and what we all need to learn. ?

? 1. What Happened?

? Qubic's Claim: They announced control of 51%+ hashrate ?, showing a 6-block reorg. If true, this means possible double spends, censored txns, ? chain instability.

? Reality Check: Independent analysis says Qubic never exceeded ~28% hashpower. Reorgs != proof of majority control. Don't get fooled by hype!

? Exchange Reaction: Kraken paused XMR deposits ? to protect users, though withdrawals/trading still open. Shows how fragile trust can be during such events.

? 2. Dev Community Response (XMR + FCMP)

? FCMP Innovations: Luke Parker (dev) and others are pushing privacy + consensus upgrades. These aren't rushed — better to be safe than sorry.

? Community Fightback: Some in the Monero scene launched counter-attacks against Qubic's pool ?, while others called for more decentralization (P2Pool, smaller miners).

? Meta-Issue Discussions: Developers are collecting ideas for hard/soft forks to make Monero more resilient. Your voice matters!

? 3. Lessons Learned

? Reorgs != Automatic 51% Attack: Always double-check data. Inflated hashrate claims spread

FUD.

? Hashpower Centralization is Dangerous: Even 25-30% is enough to spook markets + exchanges. Keep mining decentralized!

? Exchanges React Fast: Deposit suspensions = frozen liquidity. Users get nervous. Network health impacts ALL of us.

? Preparedness is Key: Strong proposals like FCMP = stronger chain. Don't rush — rushed patches risk more damage.

? 4. The Future of Monero

? Support decentralized mining (P2Pool etc).

? Get involved in FCMP & dev discussions.

? Educate newcomers: decentralization is our shield ?.

Monero is still strong ?, private ?, and community-driven ?. Let's not waste this wake-up call.

— Stay strong, stay private. ???

You can also Support the XMR Blockchain by simply CPU Mining on your unused laptops and old computers.

You have no idea what you're talking about at all times. You copy information from other sources and try to make coherent threads out of it, but your lack of understanding of the subject matter just makes your threads low quality slop.

Your calls are entirely based on emotion and you ignore major events, indicators, and macro in general, such as your XMR call where you had absolutely no idea that the chain was under attack.

Your threads are dangerous because they're rooted in nothing but emotion.

If you don't want the scrutiny, then do better.

And this right here is why you're getting my attention this morning. No the fuck it is not gambling. And it's nothing like sportsbetting. The fact that you even make that comparison is asinine and shows that you don't have a shred of any idea of what you're talking about. If investing is akin to gambling to you, then you're more far gone than I expected, and you've proven my point that you're clueless better than I could have ever hoped to.

What a clown.

YOU ARE OUT OF TOUCH. YES THIS IS GAMBLING. YOU DO NOT HAVE CONTROL. YOU ARE SIMPLY BETTING ON A MARKET. SAME WITH BLACKJACK. YOU CAN KNOW A GOOD STRATEGY BUT YOU WILL NOT ALWAYS WIN.

THE STOCK MARKET / DAY TRADING CRYPTO IS JUST LIKE GAMBLING

AI Quote: IS THE STOCK MARKET GAMBLING?
ChatGPT said:

That's a deep question! Let's unpack it:

How It's Like Gambling ?

Uncertainty: Just like betting on a game, you don't know for sure if your stock will go up or down.

Risk of Loss: You can lose everything if you make reckless bets, especially with options, penny stocks, or day trading.

Emotions: Both gambling and impulsive stock trading can be fueled by greed, fear, and thrill-seeking.

How It's Different ?

Ownership & Value: When you buy a stock, you own part of a real company with assets, products, and earnings. Gambling bets usually have no underlying value.

Long-Term Growth: Historically, the stock market grows over time (~8–10% average per year). Casinos, in contrast, are designed so the “house” always wins.

Control & Strategy: You can research companies, diversify, and manage risk. Gambling odds are fixed against you, but investing gives you tools to tilt the odds in your favor.

? Bottom line:

Day trading without knowledge = Gambling.

Long-term, diversified investing = Wealth building.

Like I mentioned before, you're clueless and have no knowledge of what you're talking about. Investing is like gambling, to you, because nothing you do is rooted in information.

Investing to the rest of us, who base our trades on info and market knowledge, is not gambling.

My cost basis here is less than $45k. I didn't nearly 20x $45k by gambling, you fucktard, I played the market to the best of my ability with both intimate knowledge of what I'm investing in, as well as paying attention to the macro.

(And this is just one singular chain, not my entire holdings).

Well good for you, go buy a fucking high dollar hooker and some coke, have a party cause you obviously have no life if you have that much money and have time to waste on this forum. I think you are lying and full of shit.

You're stuck with me, retard.

Also, enough people here know my public wallets, they can verify if they want.

AI mostly just tells you what you want to hear, but even you failed at having AI verify that investing is simply gambling. Your AI chatbot was like "Wtf is this guy on, maybe if you're blindly investing with no knowledge its kinda like gambling???"

Well your life sounds like it really sucks. Your so called 'Passion' is that of a sociopath ...

AI Quote: A "sociopath" is a term often used to describe someone with antisocial personality disorder (ASPD), a mental health condition characterized by a disregard for the feelings and rights of others. They may struggle to form meaningful relationships, lack empathy, and exhibit manipulative, deceitful, or aggressive behaviors. While "sociopath" is not a clinical diagnosis, it aligns with the characteristics associated with ASPD.

Key aspects of sociopathy/ASPD:

Lack of Empathy: A defining feature is the inability to understand or share the feelings of others.

Disregard for Social Norms: Individuals with ASPD may break laws, disregard rules, and act impulsively.

Manipulation and Deceit: They may use charm, lies, or manipulation to get what they want.

Aggression and Impulsivity: Aggressive behavior and difficulty controlling impulses are common.

Lack of Remorse: They may not feel guilt or remorse for harming others.

Superficial Charm: Sociopaths may appear charming and charismatic, but this can be a facade.

Causes and Development:

Biological Factors: Brain differences and genetic predisposition may play a role.

Environmental Factors: Experiences like childhood abuse or neglect can contribute.

Social Environment: Family dynamics and social interactions are also important.

Important Considerations:

Not a Clinical Diagnosis:

While "sociopath" is a common term, it's not a formal diagnosis in the DSM-5 (the diagnostic manual used by mental health professionals).

ASPD Diagnosis:

Antisocial personality disorder is diagnosed based on specific criteria outlined in the DSM-5.

Treatment:

While ASPD is considered a lifelong condition, treatment can help individuals manage symptoms and improve their functioning.

Distinction from Psychopathy:

Psychopathy is a related but distinct condition, often considered more severe and characterized by a lack of empathy and remorse coupled with superficial charm and manipulation.

In summary: Sociopathy, or ASPD, involves a constellation of traits and behaviors that indicate a significant disregard for others and social norms. While not a formal diagnosis, understanding these characteristics can help identify individuals who may be struggling with ASPD and access appropriate support and treatment.

Despite you two trolling each other super hard. I'm gonna weigh in on my support for XMR.

In a world with increasing censorship and tracking it's gonna be XMR that's the basis for true freedom and overcoming surveillance and censorship. It's definitely not gonna be Bitcoin.

And in the end XMR might be used for a ton of P2P transactions but that's perfectly fine. I consider that even better.

I once stated a simple truth about XMR. That not a single XMR is dirty. And for that reason the whole chain is considered dirty.

Is Monero worthy of investment grade? Probably not but I'm willing to bet that in 5 years, it's not only still in the market as a popular alt but price wise it will be doing just fine.

Kraken still has it listed. It's basically on nearly every swap site. IMHO what's missing is a very strong Atomic Swap environment with liquidity.

Don't support Monero because you think it's going to up in price. Support it because it's the best alt for true privacy.

I might be missing something but what's the deal with all of these (if not fully, atleast very obviously partially) AI generated threads on the crypto sub lately? Not talking about Stanley's threads but member threads. Like what's the actual fucking point.

Being on a forum used to be fun, you'd interact with actual people doing their best to post good content, now bullshit like this completely sucked the joy out for me. It does not sound human at all. Replying on 50% of the threads here now genuinely feels like as if I'm replying to ChatGPT, which actually would be more joyful because atleast ChatGPT was always AI and you therefore don't feel like the human touch has been lost, as it was never there.

I love HF and used to enjoy the crypto sub but now I find myself actively avoiding this sub most of the time due to shit like this. On the bright side now I lurk in subs here I usually didn't bat an eye to.

JoseMar was doing it because some usergroup was holding a competition where posting threads equated to more entries in the competition or something. Resulted in a bunch of low quality AI slop threads here. He likely chose this section since there are so many topics in crypto to cover.

Stanley is more of an RSS feed covering new articles on CoinTelegraph, sometimes it touches on decent enough topics, sometimes it misses.

OP isn't capable of putting together coherent thoughts on their own so he mostly recycle's other peoples opinions or uses AI.

NWO/WEF/2030 AGENDA (THIS IS REAL, LOOK IT UP!)

Potential Impacts:

Shifting Ownership Models:

Instead of individual ownership of homes, vehicles, or appliances, these items could be owned and managed by corporations or cooperatives, accessible through subscription services or shared platforms.

Reduced Material Possessions:

Individuals may own fewer physical items, leading to a more minimalist lifestyle and potentially reducing waste.

Emphasis on Access and Convenience:

Focus could shift towards convenient access to services and experiences rather than the accumulation of physical goods.

Potential Economic Changes:

The rise of subscription-based models could impact traditional industries and create new forms of economic inequality.

Social Implications:

This shift could alter social interactions, personal identity, and the way people relate to their environment.
