

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: The UK government is like North Korea

thatcyplex34 - August 21, 2025, 1:07 pm

The online safety act in the UK, which essentially censors platforms like Wikipedia in the name of "protecting kids," reminds me of North Korea. I believe that if they censor Wikipedia, they will suppress the valuable information it contains and prevent unwanted content from being posted. This situation feels as though the UK is regressing to a time similar to 1945 or resembling the censorship seen in North Korea.

Juoku - August 21, 2025, 1:49 pm

Well, that's the problem, people will always try to justify censorship and other controlling behaviors with "logic", stating its to protect the kids or some other bullshit...

Seriously, how about you let the parents worry about that? if I have a problem with Wikipedia, I will block it for my kids, if they don't know how to, there are private companies who do that for you, let people make their own damn decisions instead of forcing them down people's throats.

W1NK1LL3RX - August 21, 2025, 3:23 pm

(Aug 21, 2025 01:07 PM)thatcyplex34 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The online safety act in the UK, which essentially censors platforms like Wikipedia in the name of "protecting kids," reminds me of North Korea. I believe that if they censor Wikipedia, they will suppress the valuable information it contains and prevent unwanted content from being posted. This situation feels as though the UK is regressing to a time similar to 1945 or resembling the censorship seen in North Korea.

Yeah, it definitely feels like a dangerous slope. Once a government starts justifying censorship "for safety," it rarely stops at the first target. Wikipedia is one of the last places where knowledge is openly shared and cross-checked, so restricting it doesn't just "protect kids", it weakens society's ability to think critically and access unbiased information. It does feel more like control than protection, and history has shown where that road leads.

thatcyplex34 - August 24, 2025, 8:25 am

(Aug 21, 2025 01:49 PM)Juoku Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well, that's the problem, people will always try to justify censorship and other controlling behaviors with "logic", stating its to protect the kids or some other bullshit...

Seriously, how about you let the parents worry about that? if I have a problem with Wikipedia, I will block it for my kids, if they don't know how to, there are private companies who do that for you, let people make their own damn decisions instead of forcing them down people's throats.

There's literally built-in parental control on some new routers that parents can switch on, but the parents are just being lazy

Omniscient - August 24, 2025, 9:27 am

The UK is out of control and I do not understand why the citizens aren't storming Parliament.

Rsynced - August 24, 2025, 9:37 am

They should burn all physical encyclopedia books, this was effective in the past obviously.

Jamika - August 24, 2025, 10:40 am

I like this actually, unless u prefer ur kids to watch porn and so on

ONEEYED - August 24, 2025, 1:52 pm

(Aug 21, 2025 01:07 PM)thatcyplex34 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The online safety act in the UK, which essentially censors platforms like Wikipedia in the name of "protecting kids," reminds me of North Korea. I believe that if they censor Wikipedia, they will suppress the valuable information it contains and prevent unwanted content from being posted. This situation feels as though the UK is regressing to a time similar to 1945 or resembling the censorship seen in North Korea.

Even I Facebook they arrest you for some random comment

TheAvatar - August 24, 2025, 8:04 pm

I miss when the internet was a free playground. Well, more of the wild west. Before the masses got online and ruined it.

Rsynced - August 25, 2025, 12:31 am

(Aug 24, 2025 10:40 AM)Jamika Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I like this actually, unless u prefer ur kids to watch porn and so on Wait what? Wikipedia has pron?

(Aug 24, 2025 08:04 PM)TheAvatar Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I miss when the internet was a free playground. Well, more of the wild west. Before the masses got online and ruined it.

It still is... Just don't go on the masses websites. IMHO the internet is better than ever before! 56k AOL used to suck bro!

HMU on #teenchat ROTFL

Jamika - August 25, 2025, 12:44 am

(Aug 25, 2025 12:31 AM)Rsynced Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Wait what? Wikipedia has pron?

It still is... Just don't go on the masses websites. IMHO the internet is better than ever before! 56k AOL used to suck bro!

HMU on #teenchat ROTFL

I was trolling man ???

Rsynced - August 25, 2025, 1:33 am

(Aug 25, 2025 12:44 AM)Jamika Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I was trolling man ???

Oh ok... rotf

Learninghacks - August 25, 2025, 10:39 am

All west is like that bro sooner or later all west gonna follow Uk

Phantom_NiNja - August 25, 2025, 6:55 pm

(Aug 21, 2025 01:07 PM)thatcyplex34 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The online safety act in the UK, which essentially censors platforms like Wikipedia in the name of "protecting kids," reminds me of North Korea. I believe that if they censor Wikipedia, they will suppress the valuable information it contains and prevent unwanted content from being posted. This situation feels as though the UK is regressing to a time similar to 1945 or resembling the censorship seen in North Korea.

I think it's because they want to control what the public sees about their government. They're going broke. There's garbage collection companies at a halt because the workers wants more money and the companies are in the red. Right now the UK has a lot of trash in the streets.

However, they're green lighting immigrants from 3rd world countries to come into the Uk and work those jobs for cheap.

For this to work they need to control the internet to not alert their own people on what's going on. They're trying to replace British people with foreign workers. This is happening in Canada and the U.S.A too to a degree but not as bad as the UK.

thatcyplex34 - August 27, 2025, 11:34 am

(Aug 24, 2025 10:40 AM)Jamika Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I like this actually, unless u prefer ur kids to watch porn and so on

Most new routers come with parental controls, so I believe parents should activate these features on all devices, including iPhones and Android devices. It's important for parents to set a PIN that only they know, not the child. Additionally, they should establish restrictions for websites that the kids cannot visit, as well as those they can access.

Lowkey - August 27, 2025, 11:38 am

Except unlike the UK, North Korea is not entertaining the idea of destroying itself.

Panagiota - August 27, 2025, 7:18 pm

I have heard that EU will vote for a very similar law next year.

simonoverleak341 - August 28, 2025, 2:19 am

(Aug 27, 2025 07:18 PM)Panagiota Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have heard that EU will vote for a very similar law next year.

They've already passed the Digital Services Act which is bad enough.

7 - August 28, 2025, 2:37 am

I have said this for a long time.

COVID was a test of people's compliance. People stayed home and did as they were told.

In the 80's or 90's there would of been massive uprisings for many current world situations, this one for example but also many others even the taxation in the UK has gone out of control. But these days, people are just idiots laughing at stupid videos meant to keep their brain occupied while governments take full control of their life, their success, their wealth and their freedom.

When I see drones being used by law enforcement for catching road offenses and monitoring people it makes me angry. I just want to shoot the fuckers out of the sky.. People were worried about CCTV but now you are constantly monitored and people are too blinded by artificial media to stand up for themselves.

Freedom is something humanity is losing more of everyday

Lefty - August 28, 2025, 5:24 am

I am always surprised in a bad way when I hear about the laws being introduced in the UK.. scary stuff

kuraANT - August 28, 2025, 5:44 am

Yeah, because God forbid kids accidentally learn history instead of watching TikToks all day.

Panagiota - August 29, 2025, 11:43 am

(Aug 28, 2025 02:19 AM)simonoverleak341 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) They've already passed the Digital Services Act which is bad enough.

Yeah that is true, Digital Services Act was passed in 2022 if I'm not mistaken. But next year things might get even worse...

MB0K32 - August 31, 2025, 3:39 pm

(Aug 21, 2025 01:07 PM)thatcyplex34 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The online safety act in the UK, which essentially censors platforms like Wikipedia in the name of "protecting kids," reminds me of North Korea. I believe that if they censor Wikipedia, they will suppress the valuable information it contains and prevent unwanted content from being posted. This situation feels as though the UK is regressing to a time similar to 1945 or resembling the censorship seen in North Korea.

Bullshit

jujuju - August 31, 2025, 6:24 pm

I also want to reach the pinnacle of life, but these legs always lead me to the late - night snack stalls