? Legends Weekend Challenge — 3 Perm Ub3r Upgrades

3 Permanent Ub3r Upgrades

That's right — one of you will be upgraded permanently for producing the best thread this weekend.

? What We're Looking For:

This isn't about recycled content. It's about effort, originality, or value.

Your thread can be:

Code • A unique tool or script

- An advanced method or tutorial
- A detailed OSINT, security, or dev breakdown
- A fresh info thread packed with SEO and clarity
- Something that teaches, helps, or shows you're ahead of the curve

We don't care if it's long or short. Just make it good.

? Deadline:

All entries must be posted between:

Friday 00:00 GMT - Sunday 23:59 GMT

You have the full weekend to drop your best work.

? Winner Selection:

We'll select 1 winner based on:

Code • Originality

- Usefulness
- Presentation

Decision will be made Monday. If it's close, we may drop bonus prizes.

In order to get Ub3r upgrade perm you will need l33t but I am sure 6 will help if your not l33t upgraded already and your making an effort

? How to Enter:

Just post your thread as normal and include `[Weekend Entry]` in the title.

We'll track all entries from there.

One weekend. One shot. Three perm Ub3rs. Make it count.

I made an aimbot for call of duty on PS5 using a raspberry pi and a xim matrix. is this worthy?

No one else has done it without a Titan2, I used a xim.

Posted mine earlier today. Not a super technical piece, but more of a short thought essay and hopefully a discussion starter around the future of AI and it's relationship to human engineers in the world of software development - been meaning to write it for a while so this was good motivation to get my ass into gear.
