McDonalds mobile app has security holes which are patched now but this shows how they hire anyone to do their projects.

I am amazed at how poorly coded the app was.

What are your thoughts about this?

I blame third world devs and AI.

Didn't Mcdonalds recently also have a massive data leak of literally all its applicants because they left test login creds in prod?

Pretty shocking to see this. Not surprising at all though.

I agree to this. I can't believe a company like McDonalds would allow such things to happen.

I once saw the inside of the McDo infrastructure and I can say that I'm not even remotely surprised by this. For a company that big it's quite a mess. :)
