Hi HF,

Simple thread – what's the best purchase you've made this year for under $50?

Mine was a little mini desk vacuum I grabbed off Temu for like $8. Thing is actually a beast at sucking up crumbs and dust... never thought I'd use it as much as I do. ?

Curious to hear what random cheap purchases you guys swear by or so I know what gadgets or things I can buy on my next Temu haul.

Some good skincare products honestly! Made a massive difference in my skintone and complexion. Just a nice face cleanser + toner + lotion all that don't block pores is less than 50$ total and completely worth it compared to using raw soap.

Yes! I didn't think about that. I actually bought some serums and things too a few months ago.

A tire inflator cost around 600 pounds; I think this is less than 15 dollars.

I bought a mic from facebook market place for just on £50. Thing usually retails for 150 and it was basically brand new without the box. Turns out the woman who sold it to me tried to start a podcast during Covid and got bored before it went anywhere lol

Fifty bucks? That's my "luxury budget" for a whole month! For me, its only job is to make me sigh at my shopping cart—'cause the stuff I wanna buy? The price tag always has like three or four more fiftys after it.
