Thread: Russia threatens to seize more Ukrainian land and confiscate Britains frozen assets

Jamika - September 4, 2025, 11:28 am

Quote:A senior Russian official, Dmitry Medvedev, made strong statements on Telegram, saying that Russia might seize more Ukrainian land and “take back what it lost” through “material compensation” (meaning land or property) in response to Britain using about $1.3 billion of frozen Russian assets to fund military support for Ukraine. He also did not rule out confiscating “British Crown assets” inside Russia.

I don't know how Britain acted this way... it's behaving illogically and irrationally in any case.

It is just trying to erase a threat and isolate ukraine from other countries and their support. Technically it is a good move.

Any country with a strong military strategy would take the same approach.

I and many others support the freezing of all Russian funds outside of Russia, or inside.

I also support the striking of all energy stations, refinement facilities, and factories.

There is a very easy way to stop this. Leave Ukraine.

I don't care if people disagree, we all made an agreement to protect Ukraine and Russia is the only country that is in the wrong.

The only thing bitchboy Putin needs to hear is this:

"Budapest Memorandum, fuck you."

If someone doesn't know what the Budapest Memorandum is, they can't really speak on this topic, and if they do know what it is and defend Russia, then they aren't worth listening to.

Budapest Memorandum is important because it was supposed to be a concrete, lifetime agreement in which Russia, the UK, and US agree to never threaten or jeopardize Ukraine's political sovereignty, borders, etc, in return for Ukraine giving up their nukes.

Yes, time passes - The Budapest Memorandum did not have an expiration date. Russia violated this, betrayed Ukraine's trust, and will never see a negotiated land or military trade again.

This war will end when Russia leaves, is destroyed, or Ukraine is destroyed.
I hope to see an outcome where Russia is a failed state.

As I've predicted in the past, the only loser will be RU. Their economy is in a war time economic state, their demographics are damaged by sending their young men to die, their oil capabilities are hurting, and they are pulling every lever possible to keep the currency afloat and the population blind to reality.

I have no concerns, hesitation, or doubt when I say Slava Ukraini and may every single Russian on Ukrainian soil be met with a swift death, and turned to beautiful sunflower fertilizer in its fields.

It seems like Russia would rather return to old times. We should give Ukraine nukes.

Lmfao, okay!

If you genuinely believe Russia will "win", then... Well, you will see. Even if they don't "lose", they will not ever win.

Their economy is much more unstable than you seem to be willing to acknowledge, but I'm not saying it's destroyed.

Trump is egotistical and my predictions 6 months ago were pretty accurate.
We've continued to sell military equipment to Ukraine, to allies that give to Ukraine, and we've kept up a lot of support.
Everyone called me brainwashed for this, saying that Trump will hand Ukraine to Russia and end the war in a day. Of course, we always knew these people were challenged, but I do like the fact that the war is ongoing, and we're supporting a country that deserves our support: Ukraine.

Russia is a degenerate 3rd world country / paper tiger that exposed themselves when they failed to conquer Ukraine. They like to use the excuse that NATO and the US, etc are at war. We are not. We have barely sent any MODERN tech, and we've not really sent them much money compared to other wars.

If the US or NATO was at war with Russia, or fully supporting Ukraine, we wouldn't be discussing this because Russia would be sucking cock for shekels by now.

Fuck Russia, I say it kindly.

Facing America and NATO without significant losses, pushing the U.S. to ask that Ukraine agree to sit at the negotiating table, and frightening the whole of Europe is, in my view, a victory.

Russia isn't facing America or NATO, what are you talking about?

- Do you actually believe this???

I think this is the biggest misconception from pro-RU propaganda.

- Honestly, if US or NATO goes to war, you'd fucking know it. I can promise you that.

- Can they see the sun? Then our Air Force and bombs aren't over Moscow, or defending Kiev.

The US is not anywhere close to at war with RU, and we're nowhere close to even providing security guarantees to Ukraine.

- We aren't actively deployed

- We haven't sent our best tech or military equipment

- We are not in a war-time economy

- We have given Ukraine the equivalent of a small donation compared to our military spending

We are doing the bare minimum.

- Honestly, no Russian should hope for war with NATO or US.

- The risk of course is WW3 & nuclear fallout, but it wouldn't go well for RU by any means.

RU is a paper tiger, that's all there is to it.

RU continues to deplete Soviet stockpiles.

This is a huge win for US & EU. We no longer have to worry about Russia, like at all - outside of nukes, and even then they are behind.

Undead - September 5, 2025, 10:35 am

Russia "threatens" this, Russia "threatens" that. That's just more weasel language. Putin has damaged Russian prestige on the world stage and should be executed for treason. This thing should have been over in a week with the country known as Ukraine no longer existing.

(Sep 5, 2025 10:56 AM)Jamika Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Ur overestimating us lol , as if ur from another universe or something Absolutely not, I am even underestimating.

Public acknowledgement of military tech is understated.

I am basing my thoughts on known military tech, which hasn't released new capabilities in essentially 80 years if you go off of the creation of the nuke. We've made a few bombs, but if you look into scalar energy systems and other tech, the nuke is primitive comparatively (and safer too) - But really, there are decades of advancements that we have yet to test on modern battlefields because we haven't had a good target yet.

I'm not from another universe, no.

I think that it's important to acknowledge the following:

- Russia, a supposed world power, was unable to conquer a smaller country that has only been given limited tech by allies
- Russia, a supposed super power, has lost thousands of lives to accomplish almost nothing in the last 2 years.

Yes, they made quick progress, and then they have been at a standstill. They continue to throw innocent men's lives into meat grinders, all so Putin can maintain a war economy and pull the wool over his peoples' eyes.

If RU citizens actually gave a shit enough to rebel, they would have an easy go of it.

There is no real benefit to the war, and they will never actually look back happily at this.

The only thing happening right now is that Putin can't stop the war without facing extreme internal pressures.

Quote: Russian forces gained 4,168 square kilometers, largely comprised of fields and small settlements in Ukraine and Kursk Oblast, at a reported cost of over 420,000 casualties in 2024

Size of Ukraine: 603,628 km²

Cool, so they took over 0.6% of Ukraine in 2024.
Does that sound like winning?

Russia's propaganda is strong as fuck. People legitimately think they are destroying Ukraine. They haven't had meaningful gains for years now. The start of the war? Yes. Now? Not so much.

Here's a more recent update. They are averaging even less land per month than in 2024.

Quote: Sept. 2 update: In the period of Aug. 5–Sept. 2, Russian forces gained 222 square miles of Ukrainian territory, which marks a 2% decrease from the 226 square miles these forces gained in the period of July 8–Aug. 5, 2025. Comparing shorter periods, such as the past week to the preceding week, shows that in the period of Aug. 26–Sept. 2, 2025, Russia gained 73 square miles of Ukrainian territory (a little less than one Martha's Vineyard island), which marks a 52% increase from the 48 square miles Russian forces gained in the period of Aug. 19–26, 2025. Meanwhile, while on a visit to China, Vladimir Putin suggested on Sept. 3 that there might be a "certain light at the end of the tunnel" in peace talks on Ukraine.

Even if they gain 250 square miles (more than they did in the last month or so) per month, they would still net out at less land gained in 2025 than they did in 2024.

You see my point?

Russia is not winning this war anymore than Ukraine is.

The reason is because Ukraine gets to come out of this with billions in foreign investments, and RU comes out of this as a pariah, without significant gains at all.

Nodes. I really tried here but holy fuck man

Are you referring to the USA or Russia...

Because ... regardless this is fucking retarded at levels I do not have words for.

At the risk of embarrassing you enough to self-ban again, please spend more time than 5 free gpt prompts and 2 mins typing a response.

If it's Russia -

USA: "we need to invade iraq because they have WMDs"

American People: "Let's invade Russia"

USA: "are you crazy they have WMD's"

Do you seriously in your brain believe that one of the 3 leading global super-powers have made little to no advancement in the last 80 YEARS

You have to be smoking fucking ROCKS

Russia doesn't maintain a threat level to the US based on some war-head in a 70-80 year old silo they use as a stand-off bargaining chip hoping that one day in 100 years the thrusters on the rocket are still going to work when they push the button.

They make advancements.
They evolve and get better.
They research and learn more.
They improve tech.

The same way all the leading global super-powers do.

How is this concept lost on you?

And if it's The USA.....

The United States has the worlds most advanced military equipment / tools / missiles / planes / etc. ever. Of all time. In human history. Ever.

From weather modification hardware and know-how to nano-tech payload delivery.

It's the only reason americans can sit in their house all day and bitch about random things they know Nothing about.

It's the reason USD no matter how "weak" or "strong" it is is still the numero uno on EARTH.

Do you know what the US dollar is backed by?

Do you know why you're allowed to yell ignorantly on a hacking forum?

Do you know who since we broke off from the British has been the leading super-power on Earth and WHY?

Do you know why nobody bombs our ports?

No, they cannot nuke Ukraine without being nuked themselves.

That's the cold war topic all over again though.

I think you are brainwashed by Russian propaganda and there is no point in arguing with you about this specific topic.

You're clearly misguided if you think that RU is owning Ukraine, or anywhere close to US capabilities. They are quite the joke.

Do you know how much the US military scene is celebrating?

Russia literally exposed themselves, pants on the ground, ass up - completely tipped their hand. They are not equal, nor a concern, outside of nukes, and they won't push that button.

If you don't believe me, that's fine.

A lot of our military is preparing for war with China, not RU.

RU is not a concern anymore, thanks to them voluntarily proving their own incompetence in Ukraine for years now.

RU is like a fucking child on the playground and we're letting them bully other kids, for now.

If it were up to me we would have troops on the ground so people like you could actually understand how fucking pathetically uneducated and unskilled the RU military is.

Russia is incompetent and only propped up by nukes. If they didn't have nukes, we'd never have let them get this far and we'd have taken them out in the late 1900s instead of playing chicken with theoretical warheads.

There's nothing to really agree with to be honest, you're just relaying misinformation.

"took 70% of rare metals"

- this is one of your claims. I would absolutely LOVE to see you back this up with evidence... if you can!

You're just getting bad intel man.

Original claim:

Quote:"The Russian Federation has gained control over 70% of Ukraine's mineral resources: the largest deposits are located in the Donetsk, Dnipropetrovsk and Luhansk regions, according to Forbes. Their value is estimated at $15 trillion," Politicus wrote.

Ukraine's minerals are from 3 main regions if I remember correctly, and they are not 100% controlled by RU by any means, and even the portions that are... They are not extracting anywhere close to full value.

The original articles / fake news that said 70% was using bad math:

- Russia has a small % of the oblast
- Lets assign 100% of that oblast's minerals to RU
- Omg, Ru has 70%

See how the propaganda works? They have nothing close to 70% - period. Nothing to agree or disagree with, it's just true.

- If you disagree, show me that Russia controls regions of Ukraine that hold 70% of their minerals.
- Hint: you can't prove this because it's not accurate. RU does not have anywhere close to full control of extraction regions.

Simply put, you are just wrong my friend.

I stand by everything I write on this site because I don't make claims I can't back up with evidence. Try to debunk me all you want, nobody will ever actually disprove my claims because they're not random or my own thoughts.

I relay info, I rarely share "opinions". There's a difference.

Man even ur number of loss from Russia is not accurate

Or from Ukrainian side

Quote:National Institute for Strategic Studies of Ukraine:

With control over about 20% of Ukrainian territory, Russia has gained nearly 40% of strategic mineral reserves (including lithium, titanium, and rare earths).

EADaily agency (Russia) – February 2025:

Reported that Ukraine has lost control of around 70% of its rare earth deposits due to the Russian occupation of Donetsk, Luhansk, Zaporizhzhia, and Kherson.

Center for International Relations and Sustainable Development (CIRSD – Serbia) – Winter 2025:

Estimated that Russia seized 50–70% of resources such as lithium, tantalum, and zirconium.
Euronews (May 2025):
Cited Ukrainian experts stating that more than 60% of strategic mineral resources lie in territories under Russian control.

Russia does not control 70% :

Russian media lies frequently.

There are plenty of minerals to go around, perhaps enough to justify US/EU/NATO troops on the ground ;)
Ukraine deserves our protection. Budapest Memorandum, we already promised them (and RU too) that this exact scenario would never happen.

1. What is my # of losses from Russia?
2. What is my # of losses from Ukraine?

3. What's your Russia casualty #?
4. What's your Ukraine casualty #?

I didn't mention a number of losses, I quoted something from another time.

That said, there are hundreds of thousands of casualties - injuries or deaths (is the definition of a 'casualty').

If someone gets shot in the foot and has to leave the frontline. that's a casualty - even if they return.

I wonder what # you think is correct. It'll be interesting to know how far off your # is.

I don't really care to argue about who is stronger or not.

I am just answering the mail on any implication that RU is a modern military, or threat to the United States, as a contextual reference to consider when discussing the war in Ukraine, and RU's absolute utter failures.

i don't really need to argue, I just think it's important that people acknowledge extremely precise statistics, and accurate facts when discussing any topic. Call it autism, OCD, attention to detail, passion, or whatever you want, I do enjoy these topics because of how fucked up our internet has become, how much misinformation is spread, how much propaganda is shared, and how twisted the truth becomes.

I understand that you just listed some RU sources, and quotes.

What I'm asking is simple.

Just look at a map of Ukraine's minerals, and the oblasts, and every little region.

Then, go look at how Russia does not control anywhere close to 70% of Ukraine's minerals.

It's honestly that simple.

There are several war maps that are updated weekly, daily, etc. You can look up land that RU has controlled or lost throughout the entire war.

Russian media lies frequently.
