

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Traveling for work

Edge - September 8, 2025, 7:20 pm

I'll be traveling for work for the next 2 months.

Hotel wifi is a crisp 25MBs. Life is great.

Any traveling tips/tricks you can offer?

Rahul007rhp - September 8, 2025, 11:26 pm

Double check & pack the daily essentials carefully so you dont miss important stuff. I prefer packing light as well for ease of travel.

Jamika - September 9, 2025, 1:05 am

Enjoy ur stay , i think u dont need to worry about arrange ur room , but make sure to take your stuff to avoid buying them again

SecureOp - September 11, 2025, 5:29 am

Do you have a daily expense allowance? Expense everything if you're self employed.

Which side of the world? I head up to CA yearly for work and always try to prepare a few events in advance as once I'm there I feel lost.

FONZIE - September 11, 2025, 5:23 pm

A great advice would be to wash your hands extra frequently when visiting hotels. Lots of traffic and you can easily catch something just by hand-mouth contact. It's worth it.

Mech - September 11, 2025, 8:15 pm

I used to be on a 50/50 travel schedule. It sucked sometimes.

Get out and see the town/city. Spend the extra money to make the trip adventurous.

Phantom_NiNja - September 11, 2025, 11:51 pm

(Sep 8, 2025 07:20 PM)Edge Wrote: CITE I'll be traveling for work for the next 2 months.

Hotel wifi is a crisp 25MBs. Life is great.

Any traveling tips/tricks you can offer?

what do you do for work? Are you going to a convention?

Riggs - September 12, 2025, 12:24 am

I recommend a travel router. I've got a GL.iNet GL-AXT1800 myself. Many hotels leverage a captive portal to use their WiFi so you have to manually interact with it every time you first connect or your session expires forcing reauth. I always bridge my travel router on the first day I arrive in my hotel room, then leave it running as its own dedicated hotspot which all of my devices automatically connect to as soon as I walk in the room. Also allows me to set up a VPN server on the router so I can tunnel all my traffic wherever I like without needing to run independent VPN clients on each device.

Oh_Well - September 12, 2025, 6:42 am

Enjoy your time on the road!

007 - September 12, 2025, 6:48 am

If work affords the hotels, find one where you can earn points. 2 months at hampton will cost the company 80-100$ a night but you earn enough points to spend a few days in Waldorf Astoria.

P??sonl?af - October 3, 2025, 2:21 am

Do you get to travel for work often? I can't imagine myself having to travel for 2 months for work. I think I would miss home too much.

sharn - October 26, 2025, 11:35 am

A small first-aid kit saves the day more often than you think.

Blisters, cuts and headaches ruin trips fast.

DAL-SHA - October 27, 2025, 11:15 am

Best of luck man , stay safe , don't forget to pack the essentials and keep us updated please .. ??

Doug Dimmadome - October 27, 2025, 12:36 pm

Bring your own toilet paper. I had to travel a lot for my last job and always hated hotel toilet paper. Realized I can just bring my own toilet paper and never looked back.

I think someone else mentioned it, but a travel router for longer trips. I just have some cheap TP-Link thing and it works fine. I stopped bringing it after upgrading my phone plan to unlimited 15mbps hotspot so I guess it just depends on how good your phone plan is

JoshAllen - October 27, 2025, 1:42 pm

Have you considered getting yourself one of those mobile hot spot things?

Then you don't have to rely on crapping hotel internet.

peldon - October 27, 2025, 3:46 pm

For my work, i travel a lot. So, what can i say.....

..... enjoy !!!

Dylan Is good - October 27, 2025, 4:01 pm

dont eat yellow snow

Envy - October 27, 2025, 4:29 pm

(Oct 27, 2025 04:01 PM)Dylan Is good Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) dont eat yellow snow

This.

Bet you this guy is loaded with handy travel tips.

Palestine - October 27, 2025, 6:21 pm

(Sep 8, 2025 07:20 PM)Edge Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'll be traveling for work for the next 2 months.

Hotel wifi is a crisp 25MBs. Life is great.

Any traveling tips/tricks you can offer?

Are they covering your travel expenses? They better be I'd imagine

DAL-SHA - October 30, 2025, 10:01 am

(Oct 27, 2025 04:01 PM)Dylan Is good Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) dont eat yellow snow

What is Yellow snow sir ?? Care to elaborate please ?

Respect - October 30, 2025, 11:32 am

(Sep 12, 2025 12:24 AM)Riggs Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I recommend a travel router. I've got a GL.iNet GL-AXT1800 myself. Many hotels leverage a captive portal to use their WiFi so you have to manually interact with it every time you first connect or your session expires forcing reauth. I always bridge my travel router on the first day I arrive in my hotel room, then leave it running as its own dedicated hotspot which all of my devices automatically connect to as soon as I walk in the room. Also allows me to set up a VPN server on the router so I can tunnel all my traffic wherever I like without needing to run independent VPN clients on each device.

Wow! You just put me on. I'm going to look into this brugge97 - October 30, 2025, 1:53 pm

45 mins for me :S

B3A - October 30, 2025, 4:59 pm

Use chat GPT to pack everything needed for hotels and on go!

Jinu - October 31, 2025, 9:23 am

Nice! Stable hotel Wi-Fi is a blessing when traveling. I'd say keep a small power strip, a VPN, and maybe download maps offline just in case. Also, don't trust that "free breakfast coffee" too much ?

Pimping - October 31, 2025, 7:57 pm

I would pre download all stuff like movies and books and all to keep you occupied since the internet is bad you might not be able to stream that well on netflix or any sites.... better to have videos and stuff downloaded so no interruptions

Hazzzzzza - November 2, 2025, 1:00 am enjoy your time! but be careful at hotels